JFK Military Shakeup Holds Major Change In Arms Roles

$120-Week Stock Clerk Jailed As $1.3-Million Theft Suspect

NEW YORK (AP)—It was a simple case of larceny, but even the Brinks robbers would blink in awe at the daring of a $120-a-week clerk accused of stealing $1.3 million in stock certificates from a Wall Street brokerage house.

The get-rich-quick scheme developed from a joking conversation between two pals at a bar, the district attorney's office said.

The Brink's robbery of more than a dozen years ago—didn't start with any jokes. But the 11 bandits who robbed the Boston counting house of $1,219,000 in cash—wore Halloween masks.

Police and the FBI announced solution of one of the biggest stock thefts of all time with the arrests yesterday of four men. They included the clerk and a confederate who buried most of the treasure in a vacant lot for a week before turning it over to a mysterious "Mr. X."

"Mr. X," the only identity pinned on him by the district attorney's office, was described as a 30-year-old free lance salesman who disposed of the stolen securities for a 5 per cent cut of the take. He is being sought. The district attorney's office said police know who he is.

Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan said stock record clerk Gordon A. Tallman, 30, the admitted "inside man" in the larceny at Bache and Co. brokers, was trapped by his own brazenness.

After lifting more than a million dollars in stocks on June 12, Tallman was too nervous to sit down during his subsequent three hours in the Bache offices with the loot secreted inside his shirt, Hogan said.

But Tallman subsequently became bolder, Hogan added—and paved the way for his own arrest—when he pointed out to superiors an error in the original listing of stolen stocks.

The supervisors duly noted the error, and also wondered how anyone not connected with the theft could have detected it.

Arrested with Tallman was Robert J. Dodge, 24, an unemployed truck driver who allegedly stuffed the securities into a tin can, buried it in a lot behind an ice cream stand in upper Manhattan, and marked the spot with a rock. Dodge checked the cache daily until June 19 when Mr. X reported

Confidence Lost Boy Will Be Found Told

Confidence that a 12-year-old Berkeley boy, missing since Wednesday in rugged Kings Canyon National Park, will be found alive was expressed today by coordinator of the search for the lad.

Nearly 100 searchers combed the heights of the park on foot today in a widening hunt for Allen Visher, son of Dr. and Mrs. John S. Visher of Berkeley. He became separated from a party of 50 Sierra Club hikers in the Dog Creek area of the park at about 6,000 feet elevation Wednesday.

The boy is a nephew of Mrs. Robert L. Mayer, 70 George Lane, Sausalito. Mr. and Mrs. Mayer are hiking in the Tuolumne County section of the Sierras, north of Kings Canyon.

San Rafael contractor Michael McLean and two of his bloodhounds, were airlifted to the search area yesterday morning by one of two helicopters from Stead Air Force Base near Reno. The helicopters, back at their base today for maintenance, were to be replaced by two other machines from Fort Ord.

Maj. Henry Wallendorf, coordinator on duty at the Western Air Rescue Center, Hamilton Air Force Base, was confident the boy would be found alive. He said other children, even younger, have survived for longer periods in the wilderness.

Skies over the Sierras were clear and there was no storm threat, Major Wallendorf said.

Park rangers called the major yesterday to request more expert mountain climbers for the search. Sierra Club members in the Bay Area were alerted and 30 volunteers met at Moffet Field at 9 a.m. today to board an Air Force transport for Fresno.

From Fresno a helicopter flew them to Cedar Grove, site of a ranger station in the park where the search is being directed. The 30 volunteers are headed by Dr. Edgar Wayburn of San Francisco. The men carry their own food and bedrolls.

There were reportedly no Marin County men in the group.

RESERVISTS FROM MARIN COMING HOME

Marin County reservists of the 94th Quartermaster Platoon, one of the units activated last October in President John F. Kennedy's 120,000-man callup during the Berlin crisis, are expected to begin arriving in San Francisco on Aug. 2 and will return home Aug. 11.

The platoon consists of army reservists from San Rafael, San Anselmo, Kentfield, Novato, San Geronimo, Belvedere and Fairfax. They have been in training at Fort Lee, Va.

A two-man party headed by SP4 Craig L. Williams will precede the main unit to prepare for its return.

Members who are flying home will arrive at San Francisco International Airport Aug. 2, and others will follow at later dates.

While at Fort Lee, the 94th Platoon took part in 30 field exercises totaling 52 days under realistic battle conditions.

The men participated in such maneuvers as Operation Webfoot at Little Creek, Va., and Logex at Fort Lee.

Promoted during the unit's stay at Fort Lee were SP5 Don B. Yee, SP4 David R. Codoni and Pfc. William Bishell.

Peru Junta Appeals To U.S. For Aid

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's ruling military junta strove today to create an image of itself as champions of democracy in an effort to win U. S. recognition and resumption of American aid.

The military chiefs who deposed and imprisoned President Manuel Prado in a bloodless coup Wednesday were staggered by the quick U. S. reaction suspending diplomatic relations and halting millions of dollars in economic and military aid.

Gen. Ricardo Perez Godoy, the junta leader, appealed to the United States to recognize his military regime.

"We are seeking to preserve democracy," he declared.

At a press conference last night and an earlier interview, the general indicated that if President Kennedy refused to recognize the junta it would be only "to cause us trouble."

He expressed hope Washington would extend recognition once it learned what he called the true intentions of the military takeover. He said the junta had no plans to seek assistance elsewhere while it tries to win its case with Washington.

Perez Godoy charged that the deposed civilian government had been siphoning off U. S. Alliance for Progress funds. He said he could give the United States assurances that should U. S. aid be resumed, it would reach the "people in our country who are hungry and need it."

"I want no commitments from the United States, only consideration and to be recognized," he said.

Dufficy, Sheriff To Meet

A meeting to seek a workable program for care of sick county jail inmates has been scheduled for 8:15 a.m. Monday in County Physician Dr. Rafael G. Dufficy's office.

Dr. Dufficy and Sheriff Louis P. Mountanos got in a heated feud that was carried all the way to the Grand Jury over the death of John Joseph Powers, 41, of Inverness. He died in county jail May 21 of paraldehyde poisoning.

Sheriff Mountanos said Dr. Dufficy prescribed paraldehyde for Powers, who was in jail for intoxication. Dr. Dufficy denied prescribing the paraldehyde.

The grand jury probe failed to resolve the dispute between the doctor and the sheriff, but the jury recommended procedures for handling sick inmates be overhauled.

The meeting Monday is aimed at improving the methods. Dr. Dufficy, who announced the meeting today, said the sheriff, district attorney, county counsel and county administator would attend.

Overhaul May See Command Unification

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President John F. Kennedy's overhauling of the nation's military leadership raised the possibility today of drastic changes in organization, command and traditional war roles of the armed forces.

It also opened the prospect of new controversies over the size of the forces and the relative weight to be given conventional and nuclear arms.

Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, controversial Army officer selected for chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, is on record with a firm proposal to abolish the joint chiefs system and replace it with a single "defense chief of staff" with "great authority."

That idea always has been anathema in Congress and Taylor seems assured to be questioned on it when he appears before Congressional committees.

MERGER SEEN

Kennedy himself is on record with a forecast that the mid 1960s may bring a merger of the Army, Navy and Air Force into a single service "dominated by a single command." That prophesy, in his 1960 book, "The Strategy of Peace" may have new significance now that the president has a slate of military leaders who are, with the exception of the Marine commandant, of his own choosing.

Announcement of the U. S. high command shakeup came swiftly yesterday after word leaked out in Paris that U. S. Air Force Gen. Lauris Norstad would resign effective Nov. 1 as supreme Allied commander in Europe and commander of American forces in Europe.

NORSTAD HISTORY

The dynamic general is 55 and has been a general officer for 19 of his 36 year service. He has commanded NATO forces for the past six years and held high NATO assignments for six years before that. No one is more closely identified with the formulation and articulation of NATO strategy.

He had differences with the Kennedy administration on aspects of strategy but there was a warm exchange of letters in connection with his retirement. Kennedy called him "a living symbol" of NATO's strength.

A few hours after confirming Norstad's retirement, Kennedy announced these shifts:

Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, 62, chairman of the joint chiefs, will succeed Norstad as U. S. commander in Europe. NATO is certain to select him also as supreme Allied commander. His two-year term as joints chief chairman expires Sept. 30.

MAXWELL TAYLOR
Joint chiefs chairman

LYMAN LIMNITZER
To succeed Norstad

Taylor, 60, who retired as Army chief of staff in 1959 in disagreement on strategy with President Dwight D. Eisenhower and his joint chief colleagues, will succeed Lemnitzer. Kennedy recalled him to active duty last year as his personal military advisor.

Army Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, 54, deputy U. S. commander in Europe and a rising star, will succeed Gen. George H. Decker as Army chief on Oct. 1. Decker will retire.

Both the Lemnitzer and Taylor appointments could be for short terms. Both are beyond normal retirement age.

EXTEND COUNTDOWN

JFK Asks Delay In Missile Strike

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (UPI)—President John F. Kennedy made a personal plea today for a 60-day-delay in a threatened strike that would halt most of the nation's missile production and snag its space program. One large union involved immediately heeded the request.

Kennedy, who also named a three-man board to investigate the stalemated dispute over new contracts said, "in this important defense industry all parties have a responsibility to cooperate in achieving a settlement without any interruption of work."

The International Association of Machinists announced in Washington that it would bow to Kennedy's request.

The United Automobile Workers also are involved in the dispute which affects 150,000 workers at 53 missile plants and bases.

A strike would stop production of such weapons as the Atlas, Titan, Minuteman and Polaris missiles and halt work at Cape Canaveral and Vandenberg Air Force Base, both major rocket and missile launching sites.

Sources close to the summer White House warned that if the president's plea was ignored, Kennedy still had recourse to a Taft-Hartley injunction which would force an 80-day "cooling off" period.

In Washington, machinists union president Albert J. Hayes and IAM vice president Jesse McGlon, in announcing their willingness to continue negotiating in compliance with Kennedy's request, criticized the aerospace manufacturers.

Involved in the dispute with the unions are the Ryan Aeronautical Co., San Diego, Calif.; North American Aviation Inc., El Segundo, Calif.; Convair Division, General Dynamics Corp., San Diego; Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., and Aerojet-General Corp., Sacramento, Calif.

Venus Shot Put Off To Tomorrow

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—A strange radio signal in the booster rocket forced the United States today to postpone for at least 24 hours an attempt to launch its first Venus spacecraft.

A spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said another try may be made tomorrow morning if the trouble can be pinpointed and corrected.

He reported only that a spurious radio signal was detected in the Atlas-Agena B rocket.

Such a stray signal shooting through a rocket during launch could upset delicate electronic components or give ground trackers a false reading which could lead to the vehicle's destruction by the range safety officer.

The postponement announcement came only 90 minutes before the scheduled time for launching the 446-pound, gold and silver plated Mariner I payload.

Mariner I is slated to race across 224 million miles of interplanetary space en route to a rendezvous with the cloud-shrouded Venus on Dec. 8—140 days after launching.

The spacecraft is not intended to hit the planet but to whiz within 10,000 miles of it before settling into eternal orbit about the sun.

Fair Peak Due Tomorrow In Sonoma

A "million dollar livestock parade" will highlight tomorrow's activities at the Sonoma County Fair, when officials expect attendance to reach its peak.

Animals owned and raised by Future Farmers of America and 4-H club members will be shown in the parade at 1 p.m. in the racing area. The parade will be led by George Otterson of Willows, riding the "only trained Brahma bull in captivity."

Following the parade will be the Barnyard Olympics at 2 p.m., also in the racing area.

The "olympics" consist of a full afternoon of events for FFA and 4-H members, including a greased pig race, calf scramble and milkmaid contest.

Two horse shows also are scheduled, one at 1 p.m. and another at 7 p.m., both at the Chris Beck rodeo arena.

Judging has been completed in FFA livestock divisions, and 4-H class judging will start next week.

Among fair winners from Marin County so far are Helen L. Hill of Point Reyes Station, two firsts and three seconds in textile crafts, Jim Tremari and Joe Fenk, both of Tomales, who won second and third in FFA Holstein judging.

Yanks Wink At Torture Of Reds In Viet Nam, Congressman Says

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A Wisconsin congressman charged today that U. S. military advisors in Viet Nam have condoned tortures allegedly practiced on Communist guerrilla prisoners in that country. He asked President John F. Kennedy to take corrective action.

The protest was made by Rep. Robert W. Kastenmeier (D-Wis.) who wrote Kennedy that American "complicity in these inhuman practices" should be halted.

He said U. S. personnel could not escape some responsibility even though the acts committed by allied Vietnamese troops.

Kastenmeier cited a recent story in Time Magazine in support of his allegations.

He said a photograph showed two Vietnamese boys, 15 and 19 years old, "being led off to be tortured under the watchful gaze of an American advisor."

Kastenmeier said an accompanying story explained that the youths were captured with Communist songbooks in their possession.

The time story said: "The older boy was pinned to the ground and — as the rangers call it — 'taken for a swim.' His jaw was forced open and five gallons of water from a rusty old can gradually poured into his mouth. The youth gagged and screamed, but refused to talk even when prodded with a rifle butt."

Kastenmeier wrote Kennedy that U. S. soldiers advising the Vietnamese represent "both the government and the people of this country."

"I am shcoked to see them associated with these practices," he said. "There is no place for our help or cooperation, or even our complacency in the face of such facts."

The congressman said he also could not understand "how men brought up in America can condone the practice of torture in Vietnam or elsewhere."

Republicans Demand Wider Senate Estes Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Disputed allegations that 68,000 bushels of government grain disappeared from Billie Sol Estes' warehouses have started a Republican demand for a wider Senate investigation.

Sen. Karl E. Mundt (R-S.D.) the Senate Investigations subcommittee's senior GOP member, told reporters yesterday:

"Now we hear that although the Agriculture Department claimed that all of the grain in Estes' warehouses was there and accounted for, there was a 68,000 bushel shortage, plus additional shortages in other warehouses with which he is connected.

"Our subcommittee could be accused rightfully of doing less than half a job if we didn't inquire into this, and do it thoroughly."

From the start of the subcommittee's investigation Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) has held open the possibility of an inquiry into Estes' amazing success at obtaining grain storage contracts from the government, collecting millions of dollars of storage fees in the process.

A House subcommittee is looking into the grain deals, and plans to resume its hearings Monday. The Senate group has been concentrating on the Pecos, Tex., financier's cotton acreage allotment deals under federal farm aid programs.

Sen. John J. Williams (R-Del.) exploded the new controversy about the grain in a Senate speech yesterday.

He disclosed a report from the comptroller general's office that 68,000 bushels of grain were missing from warehouses known to be owned by Estes, 39,633 bushels from warehouses in which Estes is believed to have a financial interest, and 7,150 bushels from facilities owned by Coleman D. McSpadden, an Estes associate.

The Agriculture Department replied in a statement that Williams was drawing "erroneous inferences from fragmentary facts."

The statement said there is no shortage other than a normal allowance for shrinkage and errors of measurement.

Then why, Williams demanded, is the department seeking to collect from McSpadden's bondsmen for at least part of the shortage, as reported by the comptroller general?

Williams and the department both noted that losses are covered by payments being withheld from Estes, plus possible reimbursement from his grain storage bonds.

'Hard For Americans To Reach Heaven . . .'

FRESNO (UPI)—Billy Graham last night said that "it is harder for Americans to reach heaven than for other people of the world because our wealth comes between us and God."

The Baptist evangelist addressed another standing-room only crowd of better than 25,000 and reminded them that scriptures say it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to go to the Kingdom of God.

"Americans are the rich men. Christ was talking about us," Graham said.

Noting the many young people in his audience, Graham departed from his prepared talk and primarily aimed his speech at them.

He said today's high school-ers are looking for security, are misunderstood, bored with life, troubled by their conscience, are searching for a challenge, and are troubled by sex.

He called on youth to let Christ become "their hero, their master, and controller." Graham said that Christ has endured every temptation that young people face today and had mastered them.

Graham challenged the Communist concept that history is swinging toward their side.

"History is waiting for that climatic moment when Christ will return to lead the world," he said.

'LADY' DRIVER COMPOUNDS HIS INJURY

NICE, France (AP)—Marcel Gruat, 70, strolling across an intersection in this Riviera resort, was knocked down by a sports car driven by a pretty brunette.

She didn't slow down. Gruat staggered to his feet and shouted uncomplimentary things about unlady-like drivers.

Still in earshot, the brunette stopped her car, roared back in reverse, climbed out, took off a high-heeled shoe and slugged Gruat on the head.

Gruat was taken unconscious to a hospital. Attendants described his head injury as serious.

U.N. Debtor Nation Might Tow Line

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—A World Court opinion that all United Nations members are legally bound to share peace-keeping costs of The Congo and Suez sparked predictions today that some debtor nations would swing into line—but not the Soviet-led Communist bloc.

The Soviet Union, which refuses to pay on either The Congo or Middle East operation, already has made it clear it will ignore the 9-5 decision handed down at The Hague and oppose any attempt by the U.N. General Assembly to endorse it.

Diplomats generally expressed confidence that the 104-nation assembly can muster enough votes when it convenes this fall to uphold the court's advisory opinion.

The Hague decision opened the way for crucial assembly debate not only on whether to uphold the court's opinion, but whether to revoke the voting power of any nation falling more than two years behind in its dues for the peace-keeping operations and the regular U.N. budget. The U.N. charter provides for such penalties, but they have never been imposed.

At present only Bolivia, Guatemale, Paraguay and Yemen are two full years behind in all U.N. assessments. By paying a total of about $37,000 they could avoid sanctions. Diplomats close to the issue predicted they would do this before the assembly meets Sept. 18 for the new session.

The United States hailed the decision as one "of fundamental importance to international law and to the present and future capacity of the United Nations to maintain peace."

Officials in Washington said the court action should strengthen President Kennedy's hand in getting Congress to let him buy up half of the 200-million-dollar U.N. emergency bond issue to help save the world forum from bankruptcy.

The General Assembly had asked the World Court to hand down an opinion whether the cost of the U.N. Congo force and the emergency force stationed between Israel and Egypt should be borne by all U.N. members as apportioned by the assembly.

Gets 20 Years In Bomb Blast

DENVER (UPI) — David W. Wion, 52, a Sacramento part-time carpenter, was sentenced to 20 years in prison yesterday on a conviction of mailing a bomb to an Eckert, Colo., woman.

U. S. Dist. Judge Hatfield Chilson, who imposed the sentence, also ordered that Wion be given a psychiatric examination while he is in prison.

Wion was convicted by a federal jury here June 22 of sending a homemade bomb through the mail to Mrs. Mildred Tandy, 46, a divorcee whom he had once dated. The Colorado woman lost both hands when the bomb exploded as she was opening the package in her general store at Eckert last Jan. 18.

Judge Chilson accepted Wion's petition to appeal the conviction to the 10th U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

X-15 Record Flight Uped

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The X-15 rocket plane altitude record set last Tuesday has been upgraded from 310,000 feet to 314,750, more than 59 miles.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said yesterday that final computations showed the pilot, Air Force Maj. Robert M. White, rose higher than originally reckoned.

The three couples were in one car. All six were described as being in their 40s. The driver of the second car was alone. He was in his 20s.

The accident was reported to the sheriff's office at 3:36 a.m. However, the watches of two women were stopped at 1:15.

The couples were trapped inside the wreckage of their car. The driver of the other was thrown partially out by the impact.

Voter Opposition To Foreign Aid Reflected In Narrow Senate Passage

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Increasing opposition among the voters to heavy outlays for foreign aid seems indicated by the narrow 16-14 margin by which senators seeking re-election supported a 4.6-billion-dollar authorization measure.

The Senate passed the foreign aid bill 56 to 27 yesterday and sent it to the House despite complaints that its prohibition against any but surplus food assistance to Poland and Yugoslavia had been stripped out in a compromise with House conferees.

President John F. Kennedy got authority to extend aid behind the Iron Curtain if he finds that it is vital to U.S. security or strengthens a country's independence of Moscow, and so reports to Congress.

This deletion from the measure obviously influenced some votes against the bill. It remains popular among some candidates to be against giving aid to any kind of Communist government.

Added to this irritant was the conference action in knocking out a limitation of 727 million dollars in aid to India, instead of the 815 million programmed for this year.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the assistant Senate Democratic leader, tried to mollify critics on this score with an announcement that the administration will limit India's total to 727 million dollars.

Behind all the bickering about individual points of contention, there appeared to be rising general opposition to continuing a large-scale assistance program. This could manifest itself when the appropriation bill to supply the actual funds comes along later.

Of 34 senators wno are running again, 11 Democrats and five Republicans supported the bill, either by voting for it or making their position known by pairs. Pairs indicate the stand taken by two senators on opposing sides when one or both are absent.

Eight Democrats and six Republicans voted against and four other Republicans who are running again did not record themselves.

There were some lifted eyebrows when Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin, top Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, voted against the bill yesterday. He had supported the original Senate version.

Wiley told a reporter he had always voted for the foreign aid program but is worried about the prospect for a badly unbalanced budget this year.

How Will Welfare Bill Affect People In State?

SACRAMENTO (AP)—How will the welfare bill passed by Congress this week affect California?

The State Social Welfare Department yesterday said it will increase federal aid to the state by more than 18 million dollars a year. State costs will rise more than one million dollars a year.

The department said this is how the measure will affect various classes of recipients:

Aged — Add 12.7 million dollars in federal funds, boosting the monthly pension by $4 to a top of $105 in basic aid and $170 for those with special needs.

Blind—Add $658,000 a year in federal funds, raising the monthly benefit by $4 to a top of $122 basic and $172 for those with special needs.

Disabled — Add $817,000 in federal funds for increased beneifts.

Rehabilitation — Add 2.5 million dollars in federal funds, to be matched with $800,000 in state money for training recipients to be self supporting and educating welfare workers.

Child Welfare — Double federal aid to a total of 1.5 million dollars annually.

Day Care — Provide $320,000 in federal funds this year and double that amount next year for care of children of working mothers.

Old age pensioners are permitted to earn up to $30 a month effective next Jan. 1, a provision expected to cost the state $380,000 a year and counties $63,000. Earning exemptions were also liberalized for the needy blind.

Families receiving Aid to Needy Children funds will be permitted to retain earnings for future education of children.

Fishy Story –But True

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — There is such a thing as fisherman's luck.

Nine-year-old Larry Simons was fishing on Memorial Causeway drawbridge. A 14 or 15-year-old boy fishing nearby struck up a conversation, then started helping Larry out, baiting his hook and helping him with his casting and so on. He had leaned his rod and reel against the railing and was helping Larry, when suddenly the rig went sailing into the bay.

Sadly, the boy left the bridge. About 10 minutes later, Larry hooked something and pulled it in. It was the older boy's rod and reel and on the end of the line was a 15-inch trout.

Now the Simons family is looking for the boy to give him back his rig.

LAOS TREATY GETS FORMAL APPROVAL

GENEVA (AP)—The East-West conference on Laos today formally approved a treaty pledging the independence and neutrality of that Southeast Asian kingdom—amid recriminations and warnings exchanged between the United States and Red China.

U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk reminded the Communists that the agreement must be scrupulously observed if it is to achieve its objective of ending civil war and taking Laos out of the cold war.

He stressed that Laos' coalition government headed by Prince Souvanna Phouma must unite the country's armed factions in a single army if it is to continue to exist.

The United States insisted that the accords provide for integration of Laos' armed forces, but in the end this was not spelled out in the treaty and declarations.

Rusk said the United States, by agreeing to sign the accord, does not imply recognition of all signers—a reference to Red China and Communist North Viet Nam. He departed from his text to register objection to distorting of fact in some of the Communist speeches, especially those of Chen Yi, Red China's foreign minister.

Chen charged that the United States was perpetuating armed intervention in South Viet Nam, and declared the peace in Laos could not be regarded as consolidated "as long as the flames of war are kept alive in South Viet Nam."

He also declared there is no justification whatsoever for American forces in Thailand.

Chen called for a new international consultation to consolidate peace in Laos and further ease tension in Southeast Asia.

North Viet Nam's foreign minister, Ung Van Khiem, also accused the United States of stirring up trouble in Southeast Asia.

In contrast with these two Communist speakers, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko used glowing language to express his satisfaction with the Laos agreement.

He told the delegates they had made it possible "to dispel the clouds of war in yet another corner of our planet, to arrest bloodshed in Laos."

"The main thing today," he said, "is that yet another hotbed of war danger in Southeast Asia has been removed and that an important step has been taken along the road of strengthening the peace in this area."

Increase In Practice Caused Resignation

The Independent-Journal incorrectly reported on Page 4 of Wednesday's issue that Sausalito lawyer Hugh Lawrence said he resigned from the Sausalito Planning Commission early this year because of a conflict of interest.

Lawrence, at the time of his resignation Jan. 1, said an increase in his law practice caused his resignation.

Founding Fathers Would Blanch Over Court's Ruling On Prayer

Verdict Goes Against Past U.S. Action

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Does the Constitution forbid agencies of government to express or encourage belief in God?

That is the real issue in the national controversy stirred up by the Supreme Court's recent ruling on prayer in public schools.

To some Americans, the First Amendment means that government must maintain an absolute neutrality in religious matters: that it may not even favor belief in God over unbelief.

Others feel that this is an extreme interpretation, which goes far beyond the intention of the Founding Fathers.

At the root of the controversy are 16 words whose ambiguity is attested by the fact that they have meant different things to different people for nearly 175 years.

The First Amendment says: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof . . ."

At the time of its adoption, nine of the 13 states had established churches. Some legislators voted for the amendment in the belief that it would prevent the new federal government from interfering with these state "establishments of religion." Others had precisely the opposite intent. Thomas Jefferson, in a private letter, construed the amendment as erecting "a wall of separation between church and state." Many, then as now, took it to mean what James Madison said in his first draft:

"The civil rights of none shall be abridged on account of religious beliefs or worship, nor shall any national religion be established."

The idea that the First Amendment forbids the government to acknowledge God or to encourage religious faith would have been profoundly shocking to many of the Founding Fathers.

Throughout its history, the United States has in fact given official encouragement to religious belief in many ways. It has, for example, granted tax exemptions to churches and permitted individuals to deduct religious contributions from their income taxes. It has provided chaplains for the armed forces and both houses of Congress. It has proclaimed trust in God on its currency, in its Pledge of Allegiance, in its National Anthem, and in such national holidays as Thanksgiving Day.

It is small wonder that many Americans who have grown up amidst these traditions are shocked when it is suggested that the constitution forbids the government to profess or encourage belief in God.

Laundry Location Cuts Time, Toil

The continuing search for ideas to simplify housekeeping has brought a common-sense solution to location of the laundry—put it in the area where the laundry originates.

For years the laundry has been a vagabond among household work areas, migrating from the basement to the utility room, kitchen, bathroom, bedroom and other areas. Now builders are realizing that a logical spot for the laundry is in the bathroom-bedroom area —or ideally a hallway between the two.

Such an arrangement puts the laundry where most of the work load originates and also near other plumbing, saving costs on building materials.

Sanford Changed Man Since 'Chewing Out' By Al Dark

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Maybe all Jack Sanford needed was a good chewing out. The burly San Francisco right-hander has lost only one game since manager Alvin Dark told Jack a thing or three in the dressing room after a loss to St. Louis June 9.

Sanford was credited with his 12th victory against 6 losses as the Giants defeated Pittsburgh last night, 6-3, in Forbes Field. He needed help from reliever Don Larsen, who pitched perfect baseball for the last 2 and ⅔ innings.

Southpaw Billy O'Dell (11-8) was slated to pitch against Pirate Alvin McBean (10-5) this afternoon.

Although the Giants didn't gain on the league-leading Los Angeles Dodgers, the victory over the Pirates meant that San Francisco will still be in second place even if the team drops the last two games of the three-game series.

When Dark accused Sanford of "just putting in a day" last month in St. Louis, San Francisco fans were surprised.

Sanford appears to be the perfect picture of grim determination on the mound. He stomps on the rubber, snarls at the batter, growls at the umpires after close calls, and sometimes gets even more annoyed at himself.

Sanford received an early four-run lead against the Bucs last night. Willie Mays, with Jim Davenport on first, in the opening inning, took over the major league home run leadership with his 27th round tripper.

Sanford helped himself in the second with a single that scored catcher Tom Haller, who had doubled.

Willie McCovey hit a blast over the left-field fence the next inning for the 4-0 cushion. McCovey, used only against certain right-handers, has hit 13 home runs, one for every 10 times at bat.

The Bucs began to peck away at Sanford, but it was hardly Jack's fault that the game ever got as close as 4-3.

With one out in the bottom of the seventh, and the score 4-1, pinch-hitter Howie Goss hit a lazy pop fly behind second base that shortstop Jose Pagan had all the way. But second baseman Chuck Hiller, watching the ball instead of Pagan, crashed into the shortstop and the ball fell for a freak double.

Bill Virdon followed with a long triple, and Larsen followed Dark to the hill.

Virdon then scored on an infield out.

With the prospect of a Pirate late-inning rally before them, the Giants were salvaged by an unusual play. Mays had doubled off Diomedes Olivo in the eighth. Davenport had walked and pinch-hitter Harvey Kuenn had been purposely passed to load the bags.

Then Orlando Cepeda tried to get out of the way of an inside pitch from reliever Earl Francis and feebly rolled the ball back to Francis. The Buc hurler fell down fielding the ball, but made a perfect peg to first baseman Dick Stuart — who dropped the ball.

Davenport and Mays scored, but Kuenn was caught in a rundown off third to end the inning.

More Miracles By Those L.A. Angels

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Put another halo around the heads of those soaring Angels from Los Angeles. They haven't run out of miracles yet. By scoring eight runs in the fifth inning — the highest in their two-year life on this planet — they gave Billy Rigney another victory last night.

The Angels' 8-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians who led 3-0 going into the fifth left them the most active dissenters to any notion of a New York Yankee runaway.

Although the Yanks powered their way to their eighth straight, beating Washington 3-2, the Angels still are only 3½ games back in second place.

The Yankee triumph served to emphasize Mickey Mantle's role as their most valuable player regardless of any poll. Mickey contributed a two-run homer and two singles.

The Angels handed the Indians their eighth straight defeat. It was the Indians' longest losing streak since their present statistician began keeping records in 1947.

Tasby's three-run homer in the third gave Sam McDowell, recalled yesterday morning from Salt Lake City, a comfortable working margin. But it wasn't enough. Sam ran into a wild streak in the fifth and the Angels kept on swinging against a long string of successors.

19 FOR MICKEY

Mantle's 19th homer and Hector Lopez' sixth gave the Yanks all their runs and broke Washington's five-game winning streak. Whitey Ford was the winner over Steve Hamilton.

In the National League, Los Angeles whipped Chicago 8-2 and remained one game ahead of San Francisco, 6-3 winner over Pittsburgh. Cincinnati topped the New York Mets 3-1 and Houston came from behind to beat St. Louis 4-3. Milwaukee split two with the Phillies, with the Braves winning the first 7-5 and the Phils taking the second 3-2.

The Dodgers' Tommy Davis drove in four runs with a couple of singles against the Cubs and became the first major leaguer to reach 100 runs batted in this season. The Cubs got off to a 2-0 first inning lead, but Ron Fairly's two-run homer tied it and Davis put it out of reach. Stan Williams (9-5) got the victory, but had to have help from Ed Roebuck in the eighth.

COLTS STRUGGLE

Houston struggled back from a 2-0 deficit and finally pulled it out against the Cards on the strength of Mejias' bases-loaded single in the ninth. Dick Farrell (6-12) struck out 12 in going the distance for the victory.

Stan Musial had a double and single, driving in two runs and pulling to within two of Mel Ott's National League RBI record.

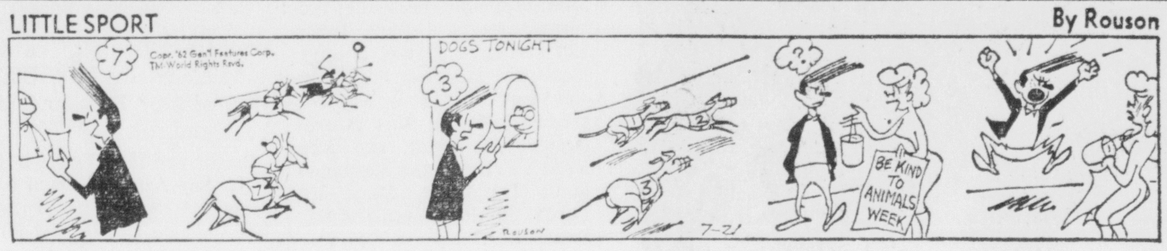
LITTLE SPORT — By Rouson



S.A., Twin Cities Champions In Li'l League Final Today

Rotary Club of San Anselmo and the Koch Luggage team of Twin Cities last night scored semi-finals victories and were battling this afternoon in the finals of the Marin County Little League Tournament of Champions. The playoff was being contested on the Twin Cities diamond in Larkspur-Corte Madera.

With relief hurler Don Alvarado and Rick Denning playing starring roles, the San Anselmo League champions downed Hamilton Air Force Base Indians 6-3 last night at Hamilton.

At Mill Valley, meanwhile, the Koch team, powered by a muscular batting show of two home runs by Tom Seidenberg, rallied from a 0-3 deficit to trim the San Rafael American League champion Cerutti Brothers team, also by 6-3.

At Hamilton winning pitcher Alvarado relieved starter Ken Soldavini in the third inning for San Anselmo after the Indians' Steve Gottlieb put his team ahead 3-2 on a three-run home run. Alvarado struck out 10, Soldavini 7, for 17 of the 18 Indians outs.

WINNING RALLY

The Rotary rallied for four runs in the fourth featuring a two-run home run by Denning.

The Indians threatened in the sixth, but a spectacular play by Curry Miller saved the Rotary.

Alvarado tripled and singled for two of the Rotary's six hits. Chuck Alverez, Mark Smolak and Miller also had hits for the San Anselmo champs. Gottlieb had two of the Indians' three hits. Denning and Gottlieb each have hit two home runs in tournament games.

At Mill Valley the Koch team faced a 0-3 deficit going into the fourth inning, but rallied to tie it up on a two-run shot by Seidenberg and a single by Jeff Land that scored Tim Trumbo.

In the fifth Seidenberg put the Twin Cities champs ahead to stay with his second two-run homer of the game. Pitcher Bob Torry, who went the distance on the mound, aided his own cause by adding another homer, a solo blast, for insurance, also in the fifth.

Ten champions of Marin leagues started the tournament Monday and today's playoff concludes the champs schedule. Marin All-Star teams start another tournament next week with an ultimate goal of the Little League World Series in Pennsylvania.

49ers Greet Their 'Best Rookie Crop'

MORAGA (AP)—The San Francisco 49ers, perpetual bridesmaids of the National Football League's Western Conference, opened training camp yesterday with Coach Red Hickey looking longingly at his rookies.

There were 25 newcomers in camp the first day, and they have some cause for optimism. In the past three years under Hickey, 24 rookies have made the squad.

Hickey says this is his best crop of rookies although giant tackle Clark Miller from Utah State is the only 49er signee scheduled to play in the College All-Star-Green Bay Packer contest at Chicago.

Six veterans, including defensive back Elbert Kimbrough from the Los Angeles Rams, reported to camp early. The 29 others were expected to report today.

Billy Kilmer, former UCLA tailback, is slated for three jobs in the forthcoming quest for San Francisco's first NFL title.

"Quarterback as usual, halfback when John Brodie is running the T, and tailback when we're in our spread," Hickey declared.

PGA TOURNAMENT

Ford Leads; Palmer Still Has A Chance

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa. (AP)—He's five strokes behind the leader; there are 12 players ahead of him and seven more tied with him with only 36 holes to go. But Arnold Palmer doesn't think he's out of the PGA championship.

Palmer's comments, after surviving what he considered a sour round in spite of the figures on the scoreboard, were typical of the attitude that has made the Latrobe, Pa., strong man one of the most exciting figures in sports.

"I don't feel like I'm out of the tournament yet. I still have a chance," he said before heading into today's third round.

Palmer's 72 over the hilly, heat-drenched 7,045-yard Aronimink course was one that would have satisfied most of the pros shooting for this big prize.

Doug Ford shot a second straight 69 for the 36-hole lead. He's the only player who beat par on each of the first two rounds.

Ford's 138 total put him just one stroke ahead of Cary Middlecoff, a two-time National Open champion, Gary Player of South Africa, and George Bayer of Miami.

At 140 were Bob McCallister, a talkative young pro from Claremont, Calif., who seemed slightly dazed to find himself among the leaders, and burly, 50-year-old John Barnum of Belmont, Mich., who shed his illusions shortly after taking the first round lead.

The crowds, which have been setting records every day of this tournament, aren't counting Palmer out any more than Arnie himself. He isn't out of reach of the leaders and the Palmer finish in golf is as famous as the Garrison finish in horse races was years ago.

Scores of the leaders after 36 holes:

Doug Ford, 69-69-138;
Gary Player, 72-67-139;
Cary Middlecoff, 73-66-139;
George Bayer, 69-70-139;
Bob McCallister, 74-66-140;
John Barnum, 66-74-140;
Bob Goalby, 69-72-141;
Frank Stranahan, 69-73-142;
Marty Furgol, 71-71-142;
Bobby Nichols, 72-70-142;
Julius Boros, 73-69-142;
Jack Burke, 73-69-142.

TWO PENNANTS FOR WESTERN MARIN TOWN

The tiny community of Point Reyes Station is beaming proudly today after two of its junior baseball teams chalked up championships in recent league competition.

Last night the Pt. Reyes team sponsored by Harold's Market defeated the Carpenters 10-4 to win the Fairfax-Sleepy Hollow Junior League title. It was the winners' eighth straight triumph and gave them a 13-5 season record.

Only last Sunday Toby's team of Pt. Reyes Station captured the San Geronimo Valley Little League with a 13-6 won-lost record.

S.A. Little League Team Wins 3rd Title

Rotary Club, with a 13-win and three-loss record, won the San Anselmo Little League title for the third year in a row.

Rotary Club's Don Alvarado led the league in hitting with a .620 batting average. Monte Nance of the Fire Department team led the league in home runs with nine.

Historic Sailing Classic Tomorrow

Dr. Emmet Rixford's Annie Too will defend the San Francisco Perpetual Trophy against the challenge of the San Diego Yacht Club in the big race tomorrow at 2 p.m.

Challenging Annie Too will be the California 32, Cholita, the standard bearer for the San Diego Yacht Club.

Jake Wosser of Belvedere will again carry on as skipper of the San Francisco Y.C. defender, and will have an all-Marin crew in Chuck Rixford, Roy Ashley, Richie Owens, Jeff Capell, Hap McGill, Hal McCormick and Rudy Knudsen.

Cholita, owned by Keith Lester, has a well trained crew which includes John Rumsey, a young veteran of Bay Area sailing and long time member of the Belvedere Club who later moved to San Diego.

MAY BE FACTOR

Rumsey's knowledge of the bay's tides and currents may well be a factor in the race's outcome.

Cholita measures 46 feet overall while Annie Too is one foot shorter. The race will be over the long channel course and the defender will get a handicap time allowance of about three and one-half minutes, an advantage that could provide the margin for victory.

Starting point will be between two buoys off the St. Francis Y.C. on San Francisco's Marina Green.

In the matter of boat-for-boat racing duels, the San Francisco Perpetual Trophy race affords the local sailing buff with the high interest and thrills attendant, on a national scope, with the America Cup races.

STARTED IN 1895

Originated back in 1895 by a group of astute yachtsmen, the battered silver mug has been the object of annual battles, with the exception of the war years, ever since. In the main, the races have been confined to inter-bay clubs. Since 1924 the Southern California clubs have essayed many challenges and, not until 1949 were their efforts rewarded.

In that year, George Fleitz, Los Angeles Y.C. skippered his Rhodes 33 Hanahuli to victory over John Lewin's Dream of the San Francisco Y.C. Despite yearly assaults by boats, representative of both the San Francisco and St. Francis clubs, it was not until 1953 a local challenger prevailed; Dennis Jordan, Corinthian Y.C., did the trick with Ah Wahine by defeating the same George Fleitz and same Hanahuli in a tight battle.

Since that year, the cup has been bandied about by bay clubs with the San Franciscans now in possession and it has occupied a prominent spot in their trophy case since 1959.

COLLEGE GYMNASTS:

HERE'S ONE WAY TO "KEEP FIT"

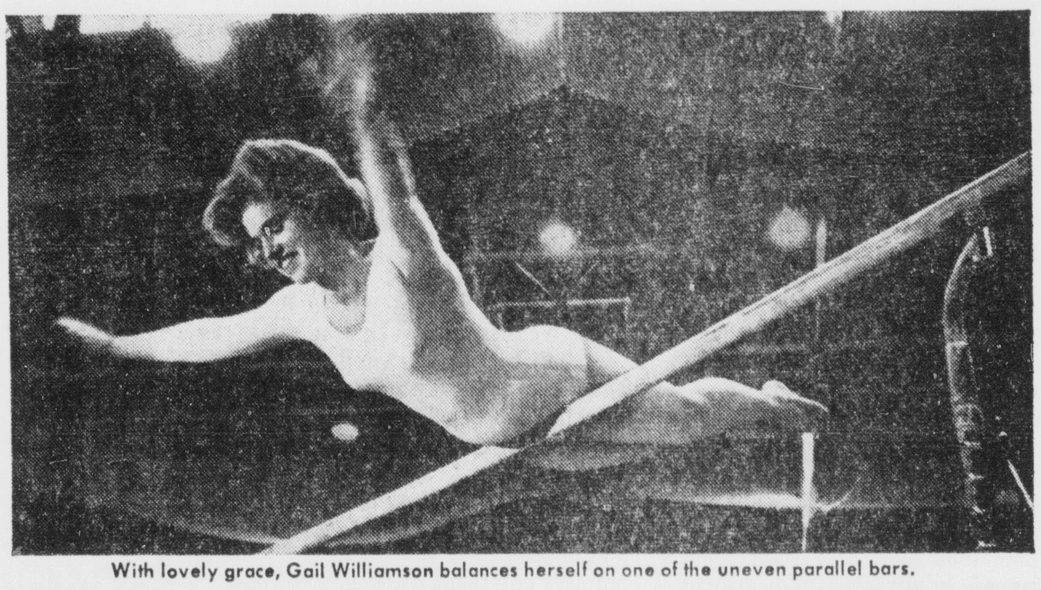
When President Kennedy advised American youth become more physically fit, he might have had the Springfield College at Springfield, Mass., in mind. The school has stressed physical education for years. Gymnastic exercises are part of the rigorous training.

Each year the school puts on a gymnastics team exhibition. The 1962 show, held in the campus hall and pictured here, was one of the biggest. Students, most of them majoring in physical education, performed with professional skill and daring. They hung from flying rings, straddled bars, vaulted wooden horses, built human pyramids, and juggled Indian clubs. As a side attraction, they presented half a dozen tableaux. This year, for the first time, 18 girls participated.

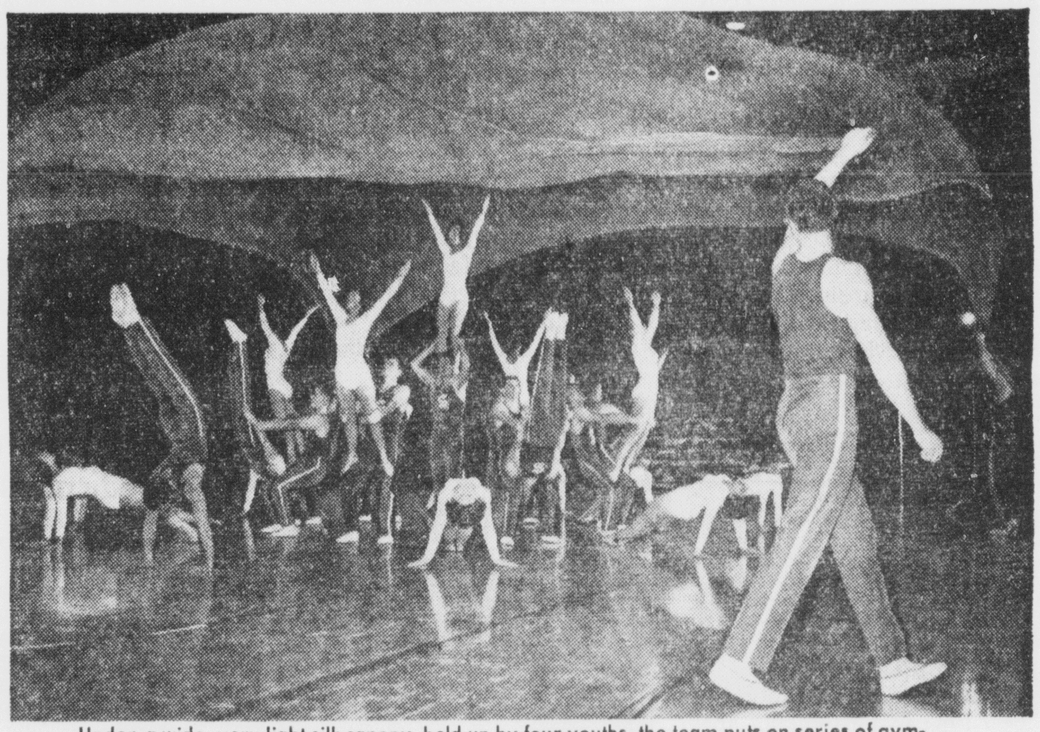
Although gymnastics at Springfield College got its start back in 1891-2, it wasn't until 1904-5 that an organized team with a coach, team captain and manager brought about the birth of the present-day gymnastics exhibition team. With the exception of three World War II years, the exhibition has been held each year. During the fall and winter, the team performs in towns and cities throughout the Northeast.

Among the students who were members of the 1891 gymnast squad were two who later won national fame in sports. They were Dr. James Naismith, inventor of basketball, and Alonzo A. Stagg, the "Grand Old Man of Football."

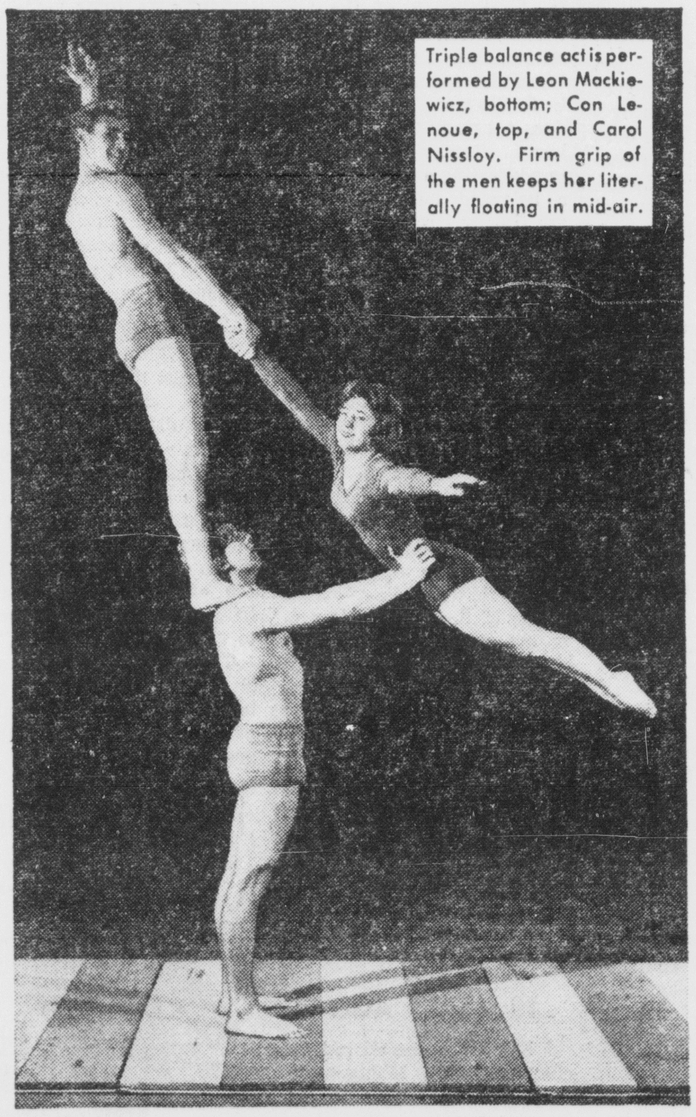
GIANT LEAP. Ken Black set the audience on edge with this leap over eight men held up on horse by other teammates. Black used a small round trampoline to make his leapfrog jump. Leon Mackiewicz is at bottom of heap, bravely bearing weight of the others.



With lovely grace, Gail Williamson balances herself on one of the uneven parallel bars.

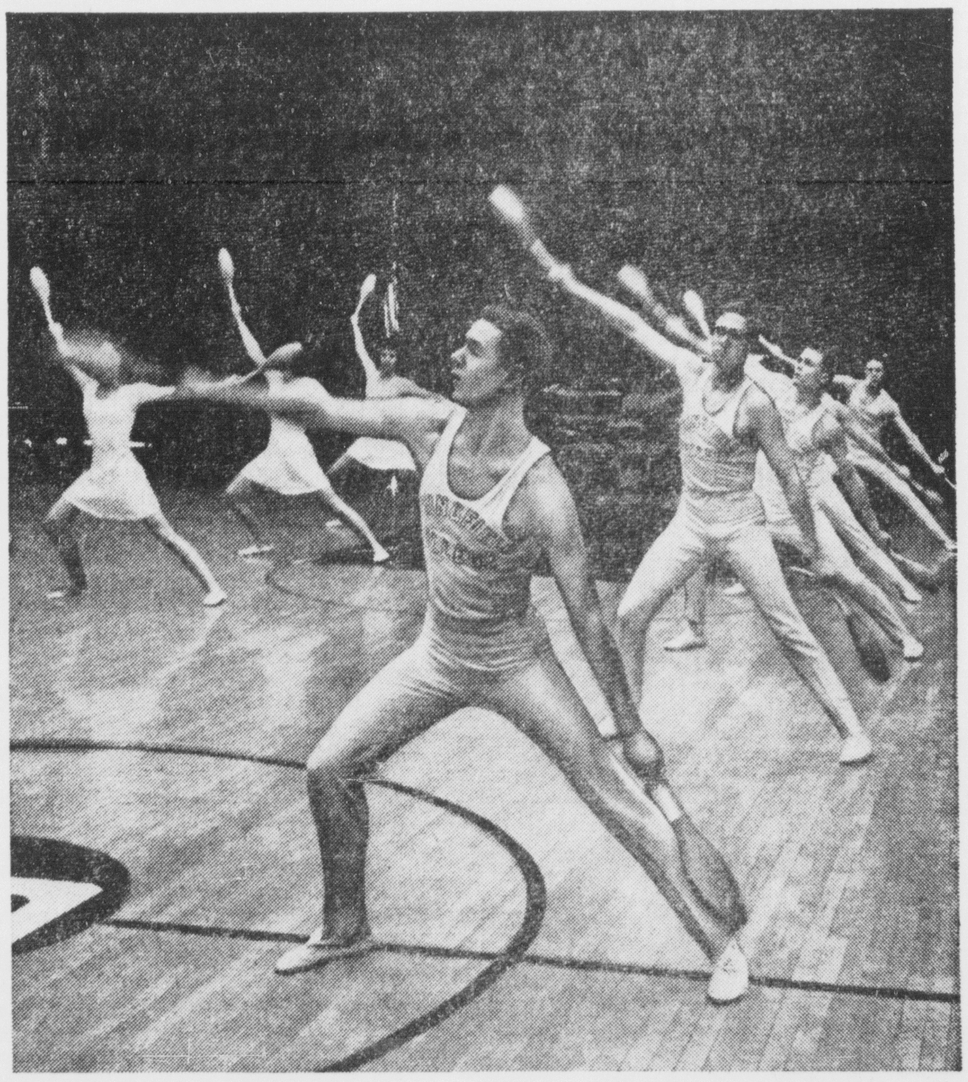


Under a wide, very light silk canopy, held up by four youths, the team puts on series of gymnastic formations. After silk falls, it's forced up again, and another set of acts is performed.



Triple balance act is performed by Leon Mackiewicz, bottom; Con Lenoue, top, and Carol Nissloy. Firm grip of the men keeps her literally floating in mid-air.

With plenty of space to spare, Wendy Condy leaps nicely over horse, while coach watches. Girls in back have completed their jumps.



Swinging their Indian clubs in unison, the boys and girls stage one of their fine exhibition drills.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

Marvin Brigham Has Been Good For Marin County

Almost 10 years ago Marin's long time county road commissioner, Carl Clow, decided to retire.

The County Board of Supervisors faced an important appointment. It was important not merely to fill Clow's shoes. They realized that Marin had started to grow, explode might be a better word. The new road commissioner would face many more problems than his predecessor.

Not only that, the supervisors had been talking among themselves about reorganizing the county operational unit so it would be under one head, a director of public works. The road commissioner should be of a quality to be considered for this job as well.

They didn't look around just in the county. Instead, they passed the word widely and several dozen applications were received. After thinning them down, a half dozen or so were actually interviewed with, we might point out, the press sitting in on the interviews.

Finally, on Dec. 29, 1952, the supervisors made their choice. They didn't go out of the county for their man.

He was Marvin Brigham, a San Rafael engineer who was acting as city engineer for San Anselmo and Mill Valley and doing the engineering for Alto and Corte Madera sanitary districts.

Brigham took over at a time when problems of subdividing and growth were becoming overwhelming. Though quiet and unassuming, construction men soon found him to be iron willed, practically immobile after he had made up his mind on a matter of principal.

Such a situation might have proved intolerable but for two other things. He also was completely fair minded and was a good engineer, he knew what he was talking about.

He has taken his share of abuse and, we assume, he hasn't always been right, none of us is. But in the long run, practically all of those who battled him over specifics, have come to respect him and his program for the county.

He has been good for Marin County. Subdivision roads aren't falling apart as soon as developers pull out of them. County roads, even in the absence of adequate funds, are in good condition. The whole public works program, for he was named its director, has been progressive and effective.

Now we are losing Marvin Brigham. Next Wednesday he leaves for the Marshall Islands, attracted by a greater challenge and more money. He will be working for the Transportation Co. of Texas at the missile testing site in the mid-Pacific.

We are sorry to see him go and send with him and his family, who became an important and active part of the community, our thanks and best wishes.

Wonderful English Language

Among our correspondents in distant countries is an elderly English woman who lives in Kent. Her letters are fascinating and well-written, but they are full of unfamiliar terms which we find extremely entertaining.

Instead of going on a shopping spree, she goes on a "shopping fuddle." When the gossiping of her neighborhood friends annoys her husband, she says he doesn't like to hear "nattering" women.

Some of the regular English expressions seem quaint to our ears. Take the English terms for a divided highway. It is a "dual carriageway." The hood of an automobile becomes the "bonnet" and the trunk becomes the "boot."

Just a few examples of our wonderful English language.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Saturday Afternoon In Mid-July Is An Unlikely Time For Politics

By CHAPIN A. DAY

Saturday afternoon in mid-July seems an unlikely time to be thinking about politics. It seems more of a time to be languishing around a swimming pool or at the beach.

Which brings to mind bronzed Sen. Jack McCarthy. He's just returned from a vacation trip to the Hawaiian Islands. Hardly got off the beach at Waikiki at all.

'CHIP' DAY

One evening he was sitting in his room at the Royal Hawaiian with his back to the window as a friend offered him a drink. He took one sip and the room lighted up, the whole sky outside was bright as day.

"Wow," he said, "what did you put in that drink?"

It wasn't until the following morning that he read about the hydrogen bomb test in the atmosphere over Christmas Island.

BUT McCARTHY is home now and those carefree days are behind him. They weren't all carefree, even there, because of the PT&T. Someone kept phoning him and asking if he'd be a candidate for chairman of the Republican State Central Committee.

No, insisted McCarthy, I'm going to support Cap Weinberger for chairman. And he is; as Weinberger's chairman. The campaign is on, with defeated gubernatorial candidate Joe Shell trying to line solid opposition against the former San Francisco assemblyman.

The decision will be made Aug. 4 at the first meeting of the new state central committee in Sacramento. McCarthy has five appointments to that committee. Two Marinites are among them, Mrs. Robert Milmoe, Jr., and Raymond H. Shone, both of San Rafael. The other three are Mrs. Janet U. Smith of Balboa, Jack Grassie of Coronado, and Mrs. Eleanor Hartman of San Francisco.

THE DEMOCRATS also are getting ready for their first state central committee meeting; it's Aug. 25. But next Wednesday Sen. George Miller Jr. of Contra Costa has called a meeting of the pre-convention platform committee to hear any proposals for planks in the state platform. It'll be in the state building in S.F., but so far we haven't found any Marin Democrats who are going to go over with planks over their shoulders.

A TIBURON DEMOCRAT, Richard M. Adams, has been named chairman of the Northern California speakers bureau in Gov. Edmund G. Brown's re-election campaign.

The interesting thing about this is that Adams just became a member of the new San Francisco law firm of Kelso, Cotton and Ernst. The Cotton there is Aylett B. Cotton, one of Richard Nixon's earliest and hardest working supporters.

NOTHING COULD STOP MOTHER

One determined woman who reasoned that "people have certain rights to protect their home and family" waged a 4-month uphill struggle to prove her point.

She and 25 other families lived within blasting distance of a construction site. They tried to get simple wooden barriers erected to safeguard their homes and children from rocks and debris thrown up by the periodic blasts.

When local officials claimed they could do nothing, the mother led her 3 young children to the edge of the blast area and waited.

"You'll have to go inside for safety," she was told.

"Why should I?" was her rejoinder. "You seem to think it's safe enough here not to take any precautions."

When company officials failed to budge her, the explosions were called off for the day while workmen put up a 12-foot high plywood shield.

It is refreshing to see what can be done, with God's help, by those who take reasonable steps to right the wrongs in the community, state, nation and world.

"So then, brethren, stand firm, and hold the teachings that you have learned."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Disappointed In Medicare's Death

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

After reading about the Senate killing the Medicare bill, I was not surprised but I was disappointed.

This once again proves that the American people must not only study the issues and candidates carefully before voting during the presidential campaigns, but do the same with equal vigor during the off-year elections as well.

We all tend to slacken off during those elections which in reality, are the key to having important proposals passed by the men we vote in, the Senate and the House.

The issues are of major importance to every man, woman and child in America. If we do not vote carefully and with sincere interest, then the President is powerless to pass any fruitful bills, and we the people must sit idly by while huge lobbies defeat these key issues.

(NOTE: It might be noted that California's Senators Thomas Kuchel (R) and Clair Engle (D) both voted against tabling the compromise Medicare bill.)

Check Candidates On Aid To Aged

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Certainly an overwhelming majority in this country believes that insuring adequate medical and hospital care for our senior citizens is an urgent national problem, and I agree wholeheartedly. What all voters must realize is that right now we are uniquely able to demand that the necessary assistance is given, rather than allowing this need to become snarled in a game of political touch football.

Last Tuesday, the Senate voted down the Social Security approach (Medicare) to this problem. This approach would have paid a portion of the hospital and medical bills of all senior citizens, whether they needed financial help or not, and the whole program would have been administered from Washington.

In voting against Medicare, the Senate did not turn its back on the problem. The Kerr-Mills Act was left in effect. This law provides federal funds, derived from general revenues, toward state-administered programs providing financial assistance directly to those who need help in meeting their hospital and medical bills.

But in order for any state to receive meaningful federal funds under the Kerr-Mills Act, it must pass enabling legislation setting up such a program, and must get the program moving. Many states have lagged badly, and many political writers state flatly there is pressure from the Washington proponents of Medicare to persuade the state governments to continue dragging their feet. In other words, they reason, if the existing program is working, Congress probably won't be talked into junking it.

This is a ghoulish spectacle. While our aged suffer, our politicians assess the problem in terms of how glamorous it can be made as a political issue for one party or the other.

One advantage of having government close to home is that the people can bring pressure on it more easily. Between now and November we are going to see a lot of candidates for California offices, from the governorship right down to the State Assembly.

Every voter, and every newspaper in the state, should demand that every one of these candidates go on record before election day: does he or does he not pledge himself to push for a substantial, effective program of medical assistance to our needy aged, under existing California legislation compatible with the Kerr-Mills Act?

From the amount of chitchat about waiting for Congress to act on another Medicare-type program "maybe next year," we'll be able to recognize who is playing political power games with the welfare of California's citizens, and be guided accordingly.

On a lecture tour, silver-tongued Norman Cousins found himself aboard a crowded Pittsburgh bus, when a young lady boarded same, laden with two large bundles and a howling baby. She took a quick look around, then deposited the baby squarely upon Mr. Cousins' lap.

Surprised, Mr. Cousins inquired, "Why, may I ask, did you pick me?"

"You have a kind face," replied the young woman without hesitation, "and besides —you're the only person wearing a raincoat."

Overheard in a Virginia motel: A mother, putting her youngest son to bed and admonishing him, "Now don't be scared by the dark. If you wake up during the night, just you holler for Mommy and I'll send Daddy in to you."

Hunting Through Back Yard At Midnight OK If You Hunt Deer

If you find someone with a high-powered deer gun stalking through your back yard at 1 a.m., blasting away at deer, what can you do?

Normally you'd think you could get him for discharging a dangerous weapon, illegal killing of deer, or at least disturbing the peace or trespassing.

But apparently there's a legal gimmick by which he can get away with it. Something about getting a permit to shoot crop-destroying deer.

They tell me that's exactly what happened in the residential area of Marinwood about 1 a.m. last Sunday.

Wonder what happens to the carcass if they do nail a deer in one of those crop-protecting roundups?

LATEST WORD is that Carmel Booth, former mayor of San Anselmo, has a pretty good chance of winning the November runoff for supervisor in Lake County. And she's only a newcomer there.

WE STILL have high hopes for the Giants this year, but we might as well be realistic and look at both sides of the picture. Here's one flat prediction we overheard at the courthouse the other day:

The Giants will never win the pennant because there's too much fighting among themselves.

What did he mean, fighting among themselves? As this gent explained it, suppose Mays hits a homer in the early innings, and Cepeda comes up a little later in a bunting situation. The manager will never make him bunt because that would leave Cepeda disgruntled for the rest of the year.

A BUSINESSLIKE gent with a briefcase walks up to the jail booking desk and demands: "Do you have music in jail here?"

For a moment, the jailers were speechless, wondering what kind of invesigation was being launched now. But the man turned out to be an attorney, wanting to know if his client, by the name of Musik, was still being held.

WE WERE wondering why the D. A. got all excited over the smuggling of some cream puffs into prison about a year or two ago.

I guess his reasoning was sound. That if you overlook a few cream puffs, they might graduate to something tougher to chew on — like razors and hacksaw blades.

With all these prison breaks and attempted breakouts going on, they've gotta be awful careful, even with the fluffiest cream puff.

Substantial Tax Cut Is Gaining Increasing Support Across Nation

WASHINGTON—An immediate, substantial, across-the-board tax cut is gaining increasingly wide support. It is now not at all improbable that Congress will act before adjournment this fall.

If there is to be a tax reduction while government spending is at its present high level, we should understand why.

If we are to have any chance of getting that understanding, the advocates and opponents of a no-delay tax cut will have to quit calling each other names and come to grips with the valid arguments on both sides.

Just because Sen. Harry F. Byrd, chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, throws the epithet of "fiscal irresponsibility" at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, does not mean that the chamber is fiscally irresponsible in advocating a tax cut before a balanced budget. Neither are fiscally irresponsible, but it is irresponsible to indulge in such name-calling.

JUST BECAUSE the AFL-CIO and the U. S. Chamber are both advocating immediate tax reduction, this doesn't mean that they are seeking the same fiscal objectives or that the Chamber is abandoning its goal of a balanced budget.

The AFL-CIO is proposing a kind of a tax reduction which welcomes continued high deficit spending.

The U. S. Chamber is proposing a kind of tax reduction which it believes will contribute most to accelerating business recovery and has the best chance of producing a balanced budget sooner than by any other method.

THE CONVICTION of the chamber—a judgment widely shared by objective economists—is that the high rate of tax on individuals and corporations is a barrier to the economic growth of the country, that the present rates steadily retard every business recovery, and turn recovery into recession.

This view unites nearly the whole political spectrum of business and government experts. It is the unanimous judgment of the tax committee of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. It is the unanimous judgment of the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

It is the overriding goal of the chamber to remove this deterrent to sustained recovery before it is too late and another recession is on us.

THE CHAMBER holds that in the end tax reduction will be the cure, not the cause, of deficit spending. He puts the equation this way: the present high tax rates produce a sluggish economy and low tax revenue. Reduction of the high rates will produce an expanding economy and higher tax revenue, which can be used in part to reduce the national debt and meet the government's real needs.

BUSINESS WEEK magazine takes the same view.

"The chamber deserves congratulations," he says, "not only for grasping the issue involved but also for facing the fact that the deficit result from tax cuts will be far smaller and less dangerous to economic stability than the one we will inevitably have if the country is allowed to slide into a recession."

These are the reasons why an immediate across-the-board tax cut is gaining mounting support in Congress and out.

It's Life And Death Struggle Keeping President Alive

By HARRY FERGUSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since the turn of the century every president of the United States has been forced to live with the thought that there is almost a 50-50 chance that somebody will try to kill him.

President William McKinley was fatally wounded at Buffalo, N.Y., on Sept. 6, 1901, by an anarchist named Leon Czolgosz. But since then no assassination attempt against a president has succeeded. This is chiefly due to the vigilance of a small band of underpaid and overworked men known as the White House detail of the United States Secret Service.

But people keep trying and there has been an alarming increase in the number of threats since President John F. Kennedy took office. The Secret Service investigated 870 threatening letters addressed to the president last year.

Every threatening letter must be investigated, the writer must be located and a determination made about his sanity. Almost invariably he is mentally deranged and is turned over to local authorities for action. In the first six weeks of the Kennedy administration the threatening mail increased by 300 per cent. An unsigned letter from Los Angeles: "We are sick of the dirty black Catholics. The next bomb will be for you, Mr. Kennedy."

Religious and racial prejudice and fanaticism seem to be the prime motivations of persons who threaten the president. The following was sent to President Eisenhower: "Address: To the Nigger loving president of the Jewnited States. Message: You will be judged in heaven if you help those black apes. And I may put there."

The Secret Service was founded in 1865, but it was not charged with the protection of the president until after the McKinley assassination. In 1913 Congress authorized the service to protect the president-elect. On last election night 15 agents were standing by at the headquarters of Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon waiting to see who would win. The moment Kennedy won, they moved in and took charge of his daily routine and his schedule for trips.

Technically, Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley is the most powerful man in the United States. He can forbid the president to take a walk or a trip to Mexico, he can tell him where to go fishing or forbid him to go at all. He can veto the choice of a summer residence and deprive Kennedy of the pleasure of seeing a Broadway show. The law charges the Secret Service with protecting the president and it charges the president with obeying the Secret Service.

Presidents, because of their living and recreational habits, posed some tough problems. Calvin Coolidge, despite his austere exterior, had a pixie sense of humor and liked to hide from his guards when he was out walking. Franklin D. Roosevelt's physical handicap made it necessary for the Secret Service to carry a squad of carpenters to build ramps up which the president could walk slowly or be pushed in a wheel chair. They also had to be especially alert for night fires because Roosevelt could not move quickly in an emergency.

Harry Truman put many gray hairs in the heads of the agents with his early morning walks. On his first day in office he surprised the Secret Service by going for a walk before full light, thereby becoming a sitting duck for any sniper firing from a window or assassins in an automobile. Truman objected to too much fuss being made and, without his knowledge, the service not only had agents walk with him but had others follow him in an automobile equipped with machine guns and telescopic rifles.

Kennedy is by nature a gregarious man and sometimes will walk into the middle of a crowd to talk and shake hands. When that happens, there is nothing the agents can do except sweat it out and try to stay as close as possible to him.

Just the other day Kennedy was engulfed on the White House lawn by 2,200 foreign students who broke through the ropes and gave the Secret Service a bad time until they could fight their way into the throng and rescue him.

The Secret Service has many things to do besides guarding the president. It is responsible for the apprehension of counterfeiters, for instance, and only a small section of the agents are assigned to the White House detail. If you walked up to a White House gate and asked to see Kennedy, you would not be met by a Secret Service agent. You would be talking to a uniformed member of the White House police force.

There probably are between 30 and 40 Secret Service agents assigned to the White House in shifts around the clock. When the president travels, they can call on branch offices of the service and local law enforcement agencies for help.

The man who probably knows more than anybody about protecting presidents is U. E. Baughmann, who retired last year at the age of 56 as chief of the Secret Service. He was responsible for the safety of Truman and Eisenhower and, for a time, of Kennedy. One of his last cases was that of Richard P. Pavlick who loaded an automobile with dynamite on Dec. 11, 1960, and parked outside of a residence in Palm Beach, Fla., intending to kill President-elect Kennedy and, at the same time, blow himself into oblivion.

It was a close call. Kennedy came out of the door and got into his automobile. Pavlick's plan was to ram his car into the one carrying the president-elect and let the dynamite do the rest. He hesitated and then decided to wait and make his attempt when Kennedy came out of church. The Secret Service got him before he got to the church.

THREE U.S. PRESIDENTS ESCAPED ASSASSINATION

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Unsuccessful attempts to assassinate American presidents:

Theodore Roosevelt—wounded in the chest in Milwaukee Oct. 14, 1912, after he had served as president and was campaigning for re-election on the Bull Moose ticket. Joseph Schrank, a saloon keeper who fired the shot because of his objection to a third term was adjudged insane and confined to an asylum.

Franklin D. Roosevelt—Joseph Zangara fired at him in Miami, Fla., on Feb. 15, 1933, just before Roosevelt took office. A woman knocked against Zangara's arm as he fired and the bullet fatally wounded Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago. Zangara was electrocuted.

Harry Truman — Puerto Rican nationalists tried to shoot their way into Blair House, where Truman was living while the White House was being renovated, on Nov. 1, 1950. One of the attackers, Grisello Torresola, was killed and Oscar Collazo was captured. White House guard Leslie Coffelt was fatally wounded. Collazo was tried for Coffelt's murder, sentenced to death and Truman commuted it to life imprisonment.

SURROUNDED — President John F. Kennedy (circle) was almost mobbed recently on the grounds of the White House by foreign students. Such a scene might prove favorable for an assassin. But the Secret Service is always on hand, and here, even two uniformed guards (arrows) are near the president. (UPI photo)

DIGGERS FIND CLUES

Origin Of Man Sought In Soil

By ALTON SLAGLE
A.P. Newsfeature Writer

Pick up a pick, grab a shovel and hop aboard the nearest jet for some place like Africa.

If you're an amateur anthropologist—and the world seems to have its share—you'll dig a lot, probably have a fine time, and likely won't find a solitary skull more than five years old.

It's the professionals who seem to have all the luck, and perhaps the most professional of all is Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey of Great Britain, who with his wife and colleague Mary, works in East Africa under sponsorship of the National Geographic Society.

Mention the Leakey name in fossil circles and just about any anthropodogist worth his Cro-Magon will become a trifle reverent.

The Leakey team, during three decades of rummaging around African fossil beds, has come up with some of the most dramatic clues available to the origin of man. These anthropological Darwins, for instance, exhumed the Proconsul — a primitive ape which lived about 25 million years ago, the 1,750,000-year-old Zinjanthropus, or African Man — the world's earliest known toolmaking being, a child even older, and the bones of monstrous, long extinct animals.

And their latest find, made this year near Lake Victoria in Kenya, is a portion of a 14-million-year-old "missing link" primate which is sort of a "sub-man," standing in the evolutionary chain somewhere between Proconsul and the African Man.

"The fossil primate is emphatically not like man today," explains Dr. Leakey of his latest find. "It would seem to be heading toward man, but it is not man." Its discovery, he says proudly, fills a "major gap in the story of human evolution."

The fossil was sealed in by uncontaminated volcanic ash which supplies the clue to its age through chemical analysis of radioactive isotopes. Its size was estimated as smaller and lighter than a chimpanzee.

Before discovery of the "sub-man," the Zinjanthropus was the oldest known man-like creature — with the exception of a child uncovered by Leakey's son, Jonathan, outdating the African Man by thousands of years.

Not particularly handsome, the Zinjanthropus had a low brow, a long face, enormous molars and huge jaws just rgiht for cracking nuts, earning him the nickname "Nutcracker Man."

Of the hundreds of fossils found through the world, five are prominent in an evolutionary study; the Nutcracker is the oldest. Next on the scale, in order of appearance, is the Java Man, some 300,000 years old and found in Java. Not much better looking than his nutcracking ancester, the Java Man had a large, protruding jaw, a broad, flat nose.

Next came the Peking Man, who roamed around China about 250,000 years ago. Oriental looking, this gent had broad, high cheekbones and a low forehead. His features were more refined. People were getting prettier.

Then the Neanderthal Man entered the scene—a much maligned, beetle-browed character who lived in a cave between 75,000 and 45,000 years ago.

Recent excavations have disproved much of the former Neanderthal image—of a slouching, woman-clubbing, hair-tugging brute with no redeeming qualities of inventiveness or compassion.

Now it's archeologically proper to boost him to a place of honor on man's family tree. The findings that brought about this transformation in thought: the Neanderthals used paints, were clever flint workers, had crude religious altars and buried their dead in comparative pomp and ceremony.

Ever since his bones first turned up in a limestone grotto near Duesseldorf, Germany, in 1856, the Neanderthal has had trouble with a poor public image.

Actually, the chap appears to have been reasonably nice looking—in the rugged, outdoor sense of the word.

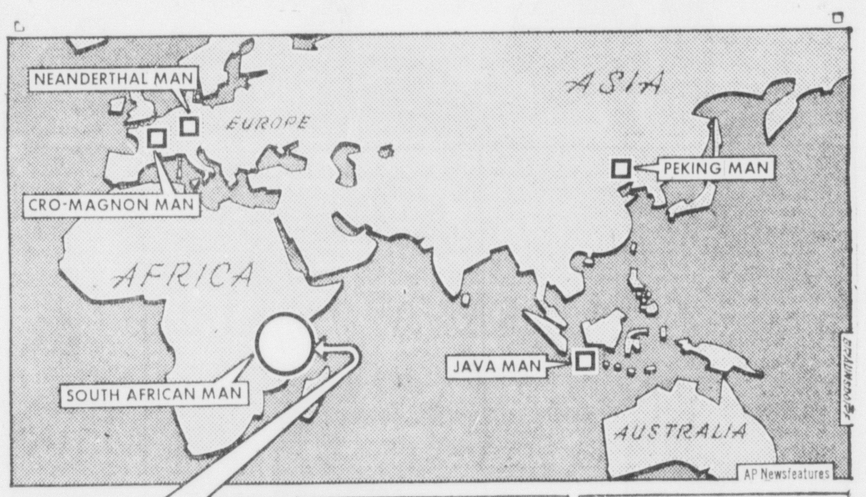
The Neanderthal slouched mysteriously, suddenly and completely out of existence about 45,000 years ago. Science can't offer a clear explanation.

Then just as suddenly, about 15,000 years later, the Cro-Magnon man appeared. A striking individual, whose reconstructed bust looks something like that of an early American frontiersman, he is the closest ancestor to modern man. There are even signs of decor-conscious wives in this group; the Cro-Magnon spent at least some time painting his cave.

Man, monkeys and apes all rose from common stock, with the trunks splitting millions of years ago and today's homo sapiens (that's us) developing slowly

"We see a few who, in one way or another, would not be out of place in a Neanderthal cave . . . The Neanderthal stamp . . . turns up in exclusive clubs."

Check the man at the next locker.



Central Africa--- the birthplace of man, the "Garden of Eden"... so theorizes anthropologist Louis S. B. Leakey, who has found in Kenya and Tanganyika some of the world's best clues to the origin of man.

U.S. (Not Russ) Hits Fly In Sky

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Khrushchev again was talking when he should have been listening.

He told a group of American editors at a Kremlin news conference that the Soviet Union had an anti-missile missile that could hit a fly in the sky. But he didn't back it up.

This week the United States hit a fly in the sky. It was done with a Nike-Zeus rocket which intercepted an Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile's nose cone over the Pacific ocean.

Not only did the United States answer Khrushchev's boast with deeds instead of words but the timing was perfect.

Other Noteworthy News This Week:

NATO — Gen. Lauris Norstad, the boyish-looking supreme commander of NATO, decided he had enough.

Norstad's service to NATO had been nothing less than brilliant and he was greatly admired by all of United States allies.

In accepting Norstad's retirement, President John F. Kennedy praised him for his work. He appointed Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and a smooth diplomat, to succeed Norstad.

Medicare — On the home front, the expected happened. The Senate killed the president's medicare legislation by a vote of 52-48.

Estes — Also in Washington, Sen. John J. Williams, (R-Del.), said a shortage of 68,000 bushels in Billie Sol Estes' grain elevators had been discovered.

In another development which at this time is remotely connected with Estes, Texas Ranger Capt. Clint Peoples said the case of Henry Marshall never would be closed until his slayer is found. Marshall, the first agriculture department official to take note of Estes' operations, was shot five times and he received numerous body bruises.

Peru — A military junta took over the Peruvian government in a bloodless coup and placed President Manuel Prado in jail. Prado still had 10 days to serve and for this reason the United States cut off aid to the new regime.

Farm — President Kennedy's farm bill was killed and Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman called the Republicans "totally irresponsible."

The trump was West's best opening lead since is put West in position to lead another trump later. The defense thus threatened to prevent declarer from ruffing a heart in dummy.

CASHED ACE

South paid no attention to this threat. He cashed the ace of hearts and led a low diamond from dummy, hoping to get to his hand with the king.

West won with the ace of diamonds and continued his defense by leading another trump. Now South had to lose two hearts, one diamond and a club. Down one.

LOOK AHEAD

South should foresee this defense from the start. He should win the first lead in dummy and lead a diamond at once, leaving the ace of hearts untouched.

West wins with the ace of diamonds and can gain nothing by leading a second trump.

Declarer overtakes and draws the last trump, then cashes the queen of diamonds and ruffs a diamond. When the suit breaks favorably, South makes an overtrick.

BROKE BADLY

If diamonds broke badly, South would lead a club and try to promote a club trick in dummy. In either case, the ace of hearts is the entry to dummy's trick.

If West returns a heart after taking the ace of diamonds, South will eventually get a heart ruff for his tenth trick. He wins with the ace of hearts, cashes the queen of diamonds and ruffs a diamond high.

Then he ruffs a heart in dummy and leads another diamond (whether or not the suit has broken) to discard the singleton club.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Shooting Victim Has Brain Damage

Jerald A. Bredahl, 30, Fairfax service station operator hit in the head by a police bullet Tuesday night, will have a "certain degree" of brain damage, the neuro-surgeon who operated on him said today.

Bredahl was hit near his left ear by a bullet aimed at the tires of a car. He was driving away after he had reportedly tried to run over his wife and two policemen.

Bredahl was in improved condition at Marin General Hospital today. He is fully conscious and is able to carry on a conversation.

His doctor said there will be some damage to his hearing in the left ear and possibly some damage to vision. He said it is too early to determine the degree of damage.

himself ready to deal, Hogan said.

An FBI agent in Newark, N.J., posed as a stock buyer to round up two others who were charged with transporting part of the Bache loot across state lines.

The pair, John Lombardozzi, 36, and Joseph G. Martinelli, 48, allegedly attempted to sell the FBI man stock valued at nearly $200,000. Other FBI agents closed in at that point to nab the two and recover the securities.

Lombardozzi, of Brooklyn, and Martinelli, of Jersey City, N.J., and the Bronx, were held on $25,000 bail each.

Burglars Make Off With $200 Lamp

Burglars broke into the vacant Country Club Tract home of Robert N. Carson yesterday and stole an antique bronze lamp worth $200, it was reported to sheriff's deputies by the owner's nephew, Thomas Carson O'Connell.

The intruders pried open the back door of the house at 320 Margarita Drive, which has been broken into twice before. O'Connell said his uncle lives in England and comes to Marin for about a month each year.

A neighbor reportedly saw three youths in an old car in the area, but was unable to get the license number, deputies said.

Jack Hogson, relief cook, and John Thoburn, business manager of the school in Ross, found Mrs. Schweizer's body lying half out of her bed in her quarters at the school about 10 a.m.

Presence of blood caused Asst. Coroner William C. Bradley to at first suspect foul play, but Dr. Warren L. An autopsy was to be performed this afternoon at Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

SMILE NOW AND—

WATCH THE BIRDIE!

It has been a constant chore to establish a system wherein I could meet personally every customer who purchased a new or used car from Ames Ford. Each idea was studied and discarded in turn as impractical or unworkable. I even mused over the notion of donning the colorful uniform and white gloves of the Roman traffic policeman and standing in ceremonial splendor smack at the door. But, when I thought of the wages of the Italian fancy-dan contrasted to mine, I quickly dispelled my reverie.

Seriously, though, it is a matter of great importance that I do have the opportunity of meeting every customer who has thankfully (for us) decided to buy from us. Nothing, I am certain, is more disconcerting to anyone who has just spent perhaps several thousand dollars in an establishment, and is casually thanked and sent on his way, without so much as an acknowledgment from the management.

How much more effort is then required to entice this individual back into your store the next time he decides to buy? All of us are gregarious in nature, in varying degrees. We all, likewise, would appreciate recognition and attention. The purchase of an automobile, in most cases, the largest expenditure of one's life second only to a home, would certainly command this recognition and attention.

Our practice of imposing on the good nature of our wonderful customers by asking them to submit to a Polaroid snap and a kindly testimonial has come closest to solving the problem of meeting all customers. For, after all, I am the official photographer, unskilled and inept as I may be.

The almost unanimous willingness to so pose and testify to our "non-agression" method of dealing, has been a personal source of considerable gratitude to me. It proves we are on the right track, and that our men, by and large, are handling themselves in a manner calculated to insure the confidence and satisfaction of our customers.

I'll drop anything, including a lecture to a miscreant, to take up Polaroid and fumble toward the daily testimonials appearing in this newspaper. Just smile, watch the birdie, and hope I don't drop the camera.

Turnabout For Bootblack

Gets Shine From Boss At Party

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP)—Every day, it's swishing the old cloth back and forth, looking at those well-shod feet perched up near his face, whiffing the scents of cleaner, dyes and wax.

Mike Graziano has toiled among them for 45 years, knowing shoes as intimately as his own stained hands.

But yesterday it was different.

Mike Graziano, 64, got a shine.

He sat back on a chair, smoking a long cigar, grinning broadly, dressed in his best suit and a red-flowered tie, his feet on a bootblack box while the boss shined his shoes.

The boss was Robert C. Kirkwood, president of F. W. Woolworth Co., where Graziano has spent nearly the last half-century polishing the footwear of executives and employees.

Down on his knees, Kirkwood did a careful job, dusting off Graziano's black shoes, shining them to a high glow.

Then Graziano stepped down, inspected the job, shook his head in approval, and tossed Kirkwood a quarter.

HIS SHINING HOUR — Bootblack Mike Graziano sits back with a cigar as Robert C. Kirkwood, president of F. W. Woolworth Co. shines his shoes. The shoe was on the other foot yesterday as the 64-year-old Graziano was honored on his 45th anniversary of shoe shining in the Woolworth Building in New York. (AP Wirephoto)

About 100 top executives of the store chain were on hand, chuckling at the reversed roles.

It was in honor of Graziano's 45th shoe-shining anniversary, and there was a two-foot-square cake, alight with 45 candles.

Kirkwood, after finishing his work, also presented Graziano with a toy bank filled with paper money. Then he returned the quarter to Graziano.

The crowd dispersed.

And Mike Graziano, of Brooklyn, like uncounted bootblacks in uncounted business buildings everywhere, picked up his box and went back to work.

U.S. Aid Goes To Chinese Refugees

HONG KONG (AP) — The United States has given more aid to Chinese refugees in this British colony in the last eight years than any other outside country.

This not only wins friends among the Chinese people but acts as a powerful antidote to the virulent "Hate America" propaganda campaign beamed out of Red China.

Most Chinese behind the Bamboo Curtain don't know about America's humanitarian efforts for fugitives from the Chinese Communist mainland. But most Chinese here do, and the word is gradually seeping back to the people at home.

The U.S. government has channeled more than 40 million dollars in aid to needy refugees in Hong Kong since 1954. This does not include donations from individual Americans, which totaled three million dollars last year.

The Hong Kong government itself shoulders the main burden of refugee relief. It devotes a third of its annual 150-million-dollar budget to direct and indirect aid for the million needy refugees here, through housing programs, medical, educational, training and other projects.

U.S. government aid to refugees takes various forms. About 80 per cent is surplus food. Millions of pounds of U.S. wheat flour, corn meal, milk and rice are doled out to refugees every month through a number of voluntary agencies.

The feeding program operates on a broad scale. One of the voluntary agencies, the National Catholic Welfare Conference, for instance, distributes U.S. relief food through 150 centers scattered throughout Hong Kong.

An estimated 200,000 refugees are registered with these centers.

Dupuis To Become Executive Of State Insurance Assn.

Fred G. Dupuis of Tiburon will become executive secretary of the California Assn. of Insurance Agents on Aug. 1.

Dupuis' appointment to the position was announced last night at the annual installation dinner of the Marin County Assn. of Insurance Agents at the Meadow Club above Fairfax.

Dupuis, who has twice been a Republican candidate for Congress from the First District, leaves a position as chief arson investigator for the Board of Fire Underwriters in San Francisco to join the insurance association. He is a former Fedreal Bureau of Investigation agent.

All officers of the Marin County association, having been re-elected, were installed for another year in office. They are: Merritt J. Wieder, president; Kenneth A. Samuelson, vice president; William McLachlin, secretary, and Ivor J. Davies, treasurer.

One new member was elected to the board of directors: Stuart Burt of Tiburon. Continued for another year on the board were Paul Terry, C. Paul Bettini, Farrington Jones, and Harold Muller.

First Phase Of Civic Center Completion Is In Sight—Maybe

By ALTON S. BOCK

The first, five-million-dollar phase of Marin County's new civic center might be completed before the end of October, but nobody is making any promises.

"It's awfully hard to say exactly when it will be ready," says Aaron Green, architect representing the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation. "The contractor is optimistic, but I do not think the county should plan on moving in until sometime in October, probably late in October."

Since settlement of the nine-week-long laborers' strike and lockout, work has been in full swing at the center, and crews are finishing up painting, plastering, floor-laying and installation of glass, hardware and wood panels.

Spokesmen for Rothschild, Raffin and Weirick Inc. of San Francisco, civic center contractors, say more than 90 workers were on the job after settlement of the strike last month. In three or four weeks, however, the number is expected to drop rapidly as the center nears completion. There were 78 men at work yesterday.

Major landscaping will not start until grading, curbs and gutters are completed, Green said Watkin and Sibbald of San Anselmo is landscape contractor for the civic center site, and Paradise Engineering Construction Inc. of Corte Madera is landscaping the adjacent county fairgrounds.

The lagoon and "rock garden" at the fairgrounds are already completed, Green said.

The civic center dedication committee will meet Monday noon in the Villa Rafael Restaurant, San Rafael. Scheduled for discussion are the board of supervisors' invitation to Dwight D. Eisenhower and a brochure for the center.

Small Harbor Petitions Are Expected

Circulation of petitions by proponents of the proposed Tiburon Small Craft Harbor District is expected to start next week, following approval by the Marin County Boundary Commission yesterday of a legal description of proposed boundaries.

Preliminary work has been done as a project of the Tiburon Chamber of Commerce with a harbor committee headed by Robert Sterling.

The boundaries as approved will include such parts of Corinthian Island as are not within the limits of the City of Belvedere, reaching northward to Mar West Drive, and extending to nine-foot depth along the waterfront of Tiburon.

Included will be waterfront areas owned by Northwestern Pacific Railroad and under lease, with option of purchase, by interests with plans for a small craft harbor essentially similar to what is contemplated by the chamber, according to statements before the Marin County Planning Commission's latest meeting.

The boundary commission also approved annexation of the Northgate Shopping Center to the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District, as well as minor annexations to Novato Sanitary District.

Sewer Easements Lack Costs Time

Developers of the two apartment projects east of the Bel Air Shopping Center on Tiburon Peninsula lost approximately a month's time last night by not having sewer easements in order for action by the Richardson Bay Sanitary District board.

The board met in adjourned session to discuss sewer facilities for Tiburon Boulevard Apartments Development and Tiburon Estates Co-operative. An engineer was present for the former concern, but the latter was not represented at the meeting.

The developers were told that if they want further board consideration, they may get their plans and easements in order and present them at the next regular meeting on Aug. 20.

Residents Of Muir Woods Want Unused Air Raid Siren For Fires

Muir Woods Park residents last night voted to ask the Marin County Board of Supervisors to give them an unused air raid siren to use for a community-wide fire alarm.

This was the only action taken in a meeting of the Muir Woods Park Improvement Assn., which is seeking to improve fire protection for the area. The meeting was held at the Muir Woods Park clubhouse.

The meeting was inspired by the destruction by fire of two houses in the area on July 4, said Margaret Hardy, president.

One of the chief problems, said Miss Hardy, lies in the water system. It has ample pressure, but lacks cross-tie lines for backfeeding when heavy demands are made at any given point.

The association plans to try organizing and training volunteers in the area to assist the Marin County Fire Department, which is the area's only source of fire protection. The county firemen are not legally obligated to fight house fires, since they are responsible for forest, brush and grass fires.

Other steps under consideration include:

1. Better identification of residences by street name and house number.

2. Preparation of a master map showing locations of all houses and fire hydrants.

3. Clearing of underbrush to reduce fire hazards.

4. An educational program to inform residents of what fire protection they have and steps they can take to minimize fire hazards.

The association's fire committee is headed by Max Janoff.

U.C. Board Approves Huge Building Program

BERKELEY (AP)—A 113-million-dollar building program for University of California campuses has been approved by the U.C. Board of Regents for 1963-64.

The program was approved late last night for submission to the State Department of Finance, the Legislature and Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

Of the amount, 74.2 million dollars is included in the 270 million bond issue labeled Prop. 1-A on the November ballot. Prop. 1-A essentially is the same as Prop. 3, which was defeated in the June 5 primary.

Amounts to be requested included:

Berkeley—11.4 million dollars; San Francisco medical center—2.6 million; Davis—9.7 million; Santa Cruz—5.5 million; Agricultural field stations—$925,000; and statewide activities—1.6 million.

The difference between expected and actual enrollment in California's system of higher education is "flabbergasting," U.C. President Clark Kerr told the regents.

He made the comment while presenting figures concerning the period from 1958 to 1961.

The board of regents also took these actions:

Appointed Dr. Maurince L. Peterson director of the statewide agricultural experiment station. Peterson, a professor of agronomy at the Davis campus, also will serve as assistant university dean of agriculture. He takes over Aug. 1.

Appointed Roy Bainer, a member of the U.C. faculty since 1929, as dean of the college of engineering at the Davis campus.

Accepted a gift of $800,000 from the Samuel H. Cowell Foundation to help build the first academic building at the new Santa Cruz campus.

2 Minor Injuries In Highway Crash

Two persons complained of minor injuries and were treated by private doctors after a two-car rear-end accident on Highway 101, 50 feet south of the San Rafael overpass, at 11:10 p.m. yesterday.

The California Highway Patrol said a car driven by Dorothy McCadden Horler, 45, of 164 Golden Hind Passage, Corte Madera, hit the rear end of one being driven by Samuel Abeno, 63, of San Francisco in the northbound lane.

Rose Abeno, 54, a passenger in her husband's car, and Mrs. Horler, and employee of the Larkspur School District, complained of neck pains.

OLD YALE GRADS DISTRESSED BY JFK

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Undaunted by the ire of some old grads, the Yale alumni magazine printed in its July issue President John F. Kennedy's speech at Yale's 261st commencement.

Yale's conferral of a degree upon conferral of a degree upon Harvard's famous son provoked angry responses, five of them printed as letters to the editor.

No favorable responses were published.

"Was the president given an honorary degree merely because of his title," asked a member of the Class of '19, "or because of something really great he had accomplished, or because Yale believed in and wanted to put her stamp of approval on his programs and theories?"

He concluded it was for the third reason.

Another letter said few presidents "have displayed the arrogance of this man in dealing with matters of grave public crisis, such as the steel price situation."

The author of this protest, a member of the class of '47, went on to say that he had "serious concern for the success of the remainder of the arts and sciences program and of the alumni fund."

The arts and sciences program, described in the magazine, raised over 52 million dollars.

The alumni fund's 20-month drive for new capital "had once again established a new record of annual giving by raising $2,722,000," the article said.

A third writer, of the Class of '53, referred to Kennedy as "a pathetic product of Harvard who regards individual human freedoms in this nation as mere hindrances to his determined experiments toward a planned socialist state."

The president's quip, "I now have the best of both world—a Harvard education and a Yale degree," was viewed as "incredibly rude" by this alumnus.

Another old grad, of the Class of '08, said the honor bestowed on Kennedy was a source of "considerable distress" to him.

The editors of the alumni magazine made no comment.

Little Boy Falls Against Window

A 4-year-old Larkspur boy tripped yesterday and struck his head against a plate glass window at the Mode O'Day store in San Rafael cracking the glass from top to bottom.

Thomas Navin, son of Marlene Martha Navin of 653 Magnolia Avenue, was treated by a doctor for minor injuries after the accident at the 1109 Fourth Street store.

Drunken Driver Gets $220 Fine

Lawrason Driscoll, 53, of 405 Gage Lane, Novato, drew $220 fine and six months probation yesterday for drunken driving.

Judge Harold J. Haley of Marin Municipal Court sentenced Driscoll for driving while intoxicated along Highway 101 in Novato on May 31.

LIKE MOST HOME OWNERS in Santa Venetia, Harry N. Johnston also owns a small outboard motorboat. Here he takes his two young daughters, Susan, center, and Jerry Jean for an invigorating spin along the Gallinas Canal. Johnston is an enthusiastic booster of boating and recreation in general as "industries" which hold the key to Marin's future. "Boating has a terrific potential for our county," he asserts. Harry Johnston—A True Reformer

Without Fanfare He Works Hard For A Bigger And Better Marin

By ALTON BOCK

Harry N. Johnston of Santa Venetia is a man who is not content with the way things are.

Since he came to Marin County 11 years ago he's been asking questions—with a certain skepticism mellowed by Irish charm and humor. The answers he's found, or hasn't found, have led him to action.

Johnston, 39, was born in Canada and spent his youth in New Jersey. But Marin means a lot to him.

HIS CONCERN has resulted in campaigns for a variety of improvements from more activities for youth to better sewers for Gallinas Village.

He's been president of a community services district, a sponsor of a Boy Scout troop and a promoter of flood control, canal dredging, improved fire prevention and Christmas benefits.

His memberships include the Gallinas Boat Club, San Rafael Kiwanis, Marin County Disaster and Civil Defense Council and a life membership in the MacPhail School Parent-Teacher Assn.

This complex of civic and political affairs in which Johnston has been a prime mover also reflects the complexity of Marin's myriad districts, community bodies and committees.

Johnston's part in it all is not that of a schemer or publicity seeker. He prefers not to think of himself as a public figure or an agent-behind-the-scene.

Instead, Johnston's style is that of a true reformer. He makes himself aware of a need and goes on to do something about it.

His day-to-day routine is largely occupied with selling what he calls an "intangible." Johnston owns and operates the J & J Appliance Service at 914 C Street, San Rafael. Keeping the complicated modern kitchen appliances of Marin housewives in operating condition is his job.

THE WAY HE goes about providing this "intangible" service is a strong indication of Johnston's patience in seeking answers to questions. Much of a typical day in his shop is spent conducting an answering service by telephone from his office.

Queries range from how to fix the hinge on an oven door to how to keep the house from flooding when the automatic washer doesn't shut itself off. Sometimes things aren't so simple, and Johnston has to engage in a verbal quiz to find out what's really wrong.

"It's amazing how, when you carefully explain what to do," he says, " a woman can come up with the strangest deductions. Then you have to start all over again."

But Johnston keeps smiling, and he keeps trying to correct whatever seems wrong. He seems comfortable in the appliance service business, but he got into it somewhat by default.

"I didn't have enough money to open a stockbroker's business or a bank," he quips. "So I started a repair service."

Since Johnston's father was a machinist, it would seem to follow that the son would be inclined toward mechanical things. Not so, says Johnston.

"I've been more interested in many other things, especially art. I've continued to do some illustrations for Kiwanis show programs and such, but I have no time to do any painting or drawing for my own pleasure."

His inclination to apply his varied interests and talents to projects may have been acquired from his uncle, who came from Ireland to Canada before World War I with the dream of building his own linen mill.

JOHNSTON'S father came along as a machinist for the mill.

"The mill was set up in a tiny town called Doon, in Ontario," Johnston said. "That's where my father met my mother, although they both came over from the same place—Belfast, Ireland.

"For a while the mill went along all right. But it really didn't have a chance. British taxes made it impossible in those days for any new industry to flourish in Canada. England wanted to protect its own economy and industries, and wanted to keep Canada on a dependent basis. Things are changing now, but the mill failed.

"We went back to Doon a couple of years ago. It hasn't changed much. It's still a small and rather weird town. Nothing is left of the mill, and nothing was built to replace it. My uncle's house has become a church."

It was 1924 when the linen mill was abandoned, a year after Harry was born Jan. 22, 1923, in nearby Waterloo, Ontario. When the mill went out of business, the Johnston family moved on to Toronto.

"Everything about those days in Canada was somewhat fantastic, as told to me later by the family," Johnston says. "My parents could tell some fabulous stories. They lost fortunes but never lost their Irish sense of humor."

Even a stove figures in Johnston's Canadian childhood. Recalling snowdrifts 16 to 18 feet deep in Ontario, he says his father once attempted to bring home a stove—by horse and sled.

"The stove fell off and sunk right through to the bottom of the snowbank," Johnston says. "They had a heck of a time getting it out."

TORONTO TURNED out to be another unlikely place for a linen mill machinist in those days, and the Johnstons moved in 1925 to Patterson, N. J.

"It was the silk center of the world at that time," Johnston says. "The big industries were silk and linen mills."

In 1930 Johnston's father bought a house in the Patterson suburb of Haledon. But the reason was not a happy one. A year earlier, Harry's 9-year-old sister was the victim of the congested streets of an industrial city. She was run down and killed by a taxicab. The family decided then to move to what they hoped would be a safer place, where they could have their own house and yard.

Johnston attended schools in Haledon, and, after high school graduation, he joined the Navy in 1942.

His older brother was already a young captain in the Marines, and in 1943 another tragedy struck the Johnston family.

Harry's brother, who was 22, was killed on Choiseul Island in the South Pacific.

"He led an advance party onto the island," Johnston says, "and I guess they were expendable. He and all his men were killed. A book was written later about the incident, but I've never cared to read it."

Johnston's own World War II experience was limited to fewer than two years before he received a medical discharge because of a stomach ulcer. After training at an aviation machinists school, he found himself in a base hospital at Norfolk, Va.

"My service was not very fruitful as far as the country was concerned," he says.

He went back to Patterson to work at the Wright Aeronautical Corp.

"After a while," he says, "I didn't like the idea of living in my home town when everybody else was at war. So in 1945 I decided to go to California."

IN LOS ANGELES he attended the Art Center School, where he studied design and advertising.

"That's where I met my wife," Johnston says. "Barbara had come to the school from her home state of Nebraska. We met in 1946. I remember the year because I bought one of the first postwar Fords at that time."

Johnston went to work for the Broadway Department Stores in Los Angeles in 1947 as an appliance department manager and later became an assistant buyer. He and Barbara were married May 2, 1948.

The next year, Johnston had a chance to work for Emerson Radio and Television Corp. as an agent to set up television dealerships in the San Joaquin Valley.

"There were no television stations in the valley at that time, and they wanted to have everything ready as soon as stations were authorized.

"But the Korean War put a temporary end to all station construction, and I decided it would be better to move somewhere else. While traveling through the state I had been to Marin County a few times, and I knew this was the place for me. I requested a transfer to Mill Valley."

He lived in Mill Valley about one year, moved to the Bon Air apartments in Greenbrae and then to his Santa Venetia home at 505 Vendola Drive.

He opened his appliance service on Fifth Avenue in San Rafael and later moved it to C Street. "The name J & J simply means my wife and I, the two Johnstons," he says. "It's appropriate, too, since our oldest daughter is named Jerry Jean."

Johnston credits his wife with the talents of an "outstanding artist. She does some wonderful charcoals and pastels, portraits and still-lifes."

About his own artistic bent, Johnston is more modest. But he has done brochures and programs for the Ross Valley Horse Show and Kiwanis Club rodeo as well as cerebral palsy posters.

"We've thought about adding a studio to our house, but we never seem to have time," Johnston says.

PROBABLY THE art project in which Johnston takes the most pleasure is his sleigh and reindeer which have become a Santa Venetia institution at Christmas.

"About four years ago, I got the idea of having a Santa Claus travel through the streets, passing out candy to the children. Five of us got together and went out to collect money to buy the candy canes, and George Hall, former county tax collector, was the first Santa Claus."

For the sleigh, Johnston designed an elaborate plywood superstructure which he puts over a small truck. Reindeer, also built of plywood, are attached to the front.

"It was built by San Quentin prisoners," Johnston says, "and I think it's really wonderful that they wanted to do it.

"The kids look forward to it each year, and I guess it's become a regular event. Santa Claus makes about 30 regular stops at street corners and gives away 2,000 candy canes altogether. We make special trips to children who are sick. It's a heartwarming thing."

Helping children and encouraging them to use their own imagination is one of Johnston's major "reforms." As the ex-president of the Gallinas Valley Community Services District, he believes it's unfortunate the district today is not inclined to encourage a tax rate increase for recreation for teen-agers.

"A lot of things are highly organized for youth nowadays," he says. "We promote Little League and a lot of activities, but youngsters are left hanging when they reach the age of 15 or so.

"We have an average of 4.5 children per home in the Santa Venetia area. In five more years there will be a mass of teen-agers looking for something to do. But unless we spend some money now, it will be too late."

As adviser for Boy Scout Troop 57 and Explorer Scout Post 57, Johnston, who was a scout himself for four years, hopes to provide some activity for young boys.

BUT AGAIN he deplores the fact that many youth organizations expect "to be helped rather than using their initiative and helping others.

"During the depression, in Haledon, a scout troop went out and raised money to buy an ambulance for the town. The boys provided a real service."

Like many Santa Venetia home owners, Johnston owns

Harry Johnston Works Hard For His County

a small outboard motorboat. He lets the youngsters in the neighborhood use his boat as long as they observe all safety rules.

"If they had some place where they could really have access to many boats, build their own boats and use their potentials, we would be helping more," he says.

The new civic center near Santa Venetia provides a great potential for recreation, Johnston says, if the Gallinas Canal were extended right into the county fairgrounds property at the center.

For three years, Johnston has touted the Gallinas Canal extension to Rep. Clem Miller, Supervisor Walter R. Castro, the county planning commission, Army engineers, county public works department and 106 Gallinas Village home owners who live along the existing canal.

He's convinced all of them of its merit and hopes soon to see some results.

"Boating is a terrific potential for the county," he says. "Some say the growth of Marin County is stymied for lack of industry, and that Congress would be more likely to aid county programs if industry were here: Recreation and boating are it.

"There's nothing better in the county to develop. It will not interfere with natural resources and beauty but will enhance them, make use of them and improve what's already here.

"YACHTING IN the southern part of the county is different. It's not available to most people. But fishermen and small boat owners use the bay mostly to the north of China Camp. The growth of the county is in the central area, around San Rafael and north.

"We should develop more canals, docks and areas used by small boats. I'd like to see the development of a tourist and recreation area comparable to Cape Cod. It's a way of improving the county and making it a finer place to live."

This development of recreation within the means of most people will lead naturally to a healthier environment for youth, Johnston says. But he doesn't consider aids to recreation as the only need. He directs his time and energy to any means of making life happier for children. "What I like mainly about the Kiwanis," he says, "is that every dime goes to benefit underprivileged children."

STEREO HI-FI

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

For the past few weeks my engineering work has had me flying back and forth several times to Reno and once to Los Angeles. Much of this work had to do with the Volume of Sound and with the amount of Reverberation of Sound in a given room.

In a large room such as a theatre, the intensity of sound can be quite high before it becomes objectionable. The reflective components, that is the sound that arrives to us via bounces from walls and ceilings, give the sound a live quality. When the same music is played in a home, using a record or tape for instance, you cannot use as high an intensity of volume. Also, because of the relative small dimensions of your room, the reflective components arrive at your ear at almost the same time as the direct sound; thus, a great deal of liveness is lost.

The record and tape manufacturers are compensating for the room effects by recording in "live studios," that is, studios that have reflective components approaching the large halls. By doing this, the reflective components are actually added to the music. Other means are also used such as electronic reverberation and echo devices.

How much volume to use in your home depends on your listening experience. Obviously you cannot use symphonic levels. You can however, use levels that in your home seem as loud and as soft as they do in large halls. Of course, how loud depends entirely on the type of music you are enjoying. It is almost impossible for instance, to get the full benefit from a symphonic work by adjusting your volume to a very low level. You will miss the soft solo passages and hear only the loud dynamic passages. You can however, enjoy background dinner music at a low level because this type of music is performed at a fairly constant volume without the great dynamic expression of the symphony.

Try experimenting with your volume settings and you will find optimum settings for your room and its acoustics.

fense Council was a result of his wish to make Marin a "finer place."

"Unknowingly, we're going to put ourselves in a disastrous situation. What happened in the Los Angeles fire could happen here. Sudden fires could sweep through our canyons, and we have no facility for handling a big fire or earthquake in any part of the county. Although the finest protection exists, it is limited. It's ready for normal, every day calls, but not a disaster."

As a member of the council, Johnston is studying possible improvements in police and fire protection as well as the needs for adequate communications and the requisites of the "smaller jobs which multiply rapidly, such as provision for food, medical care, traffic control, prevention of looting."

AS MARIN grows, the need for dedicated men like Johnston grows. There are many jobs to be done, and a determination, very much like a pioneer spirit, is demanded if these jobs are to be seen through to completion.

Searching out problems, seeking possible answers and acting before it's too late are the qualities which Johnston finds natural. He says he has no interest in a personal political future, although friends have made such hints.

He simply finds it surprising that "so many people pay no attention whatsoever to what goes on, and when something goes wrong, they wonder why."

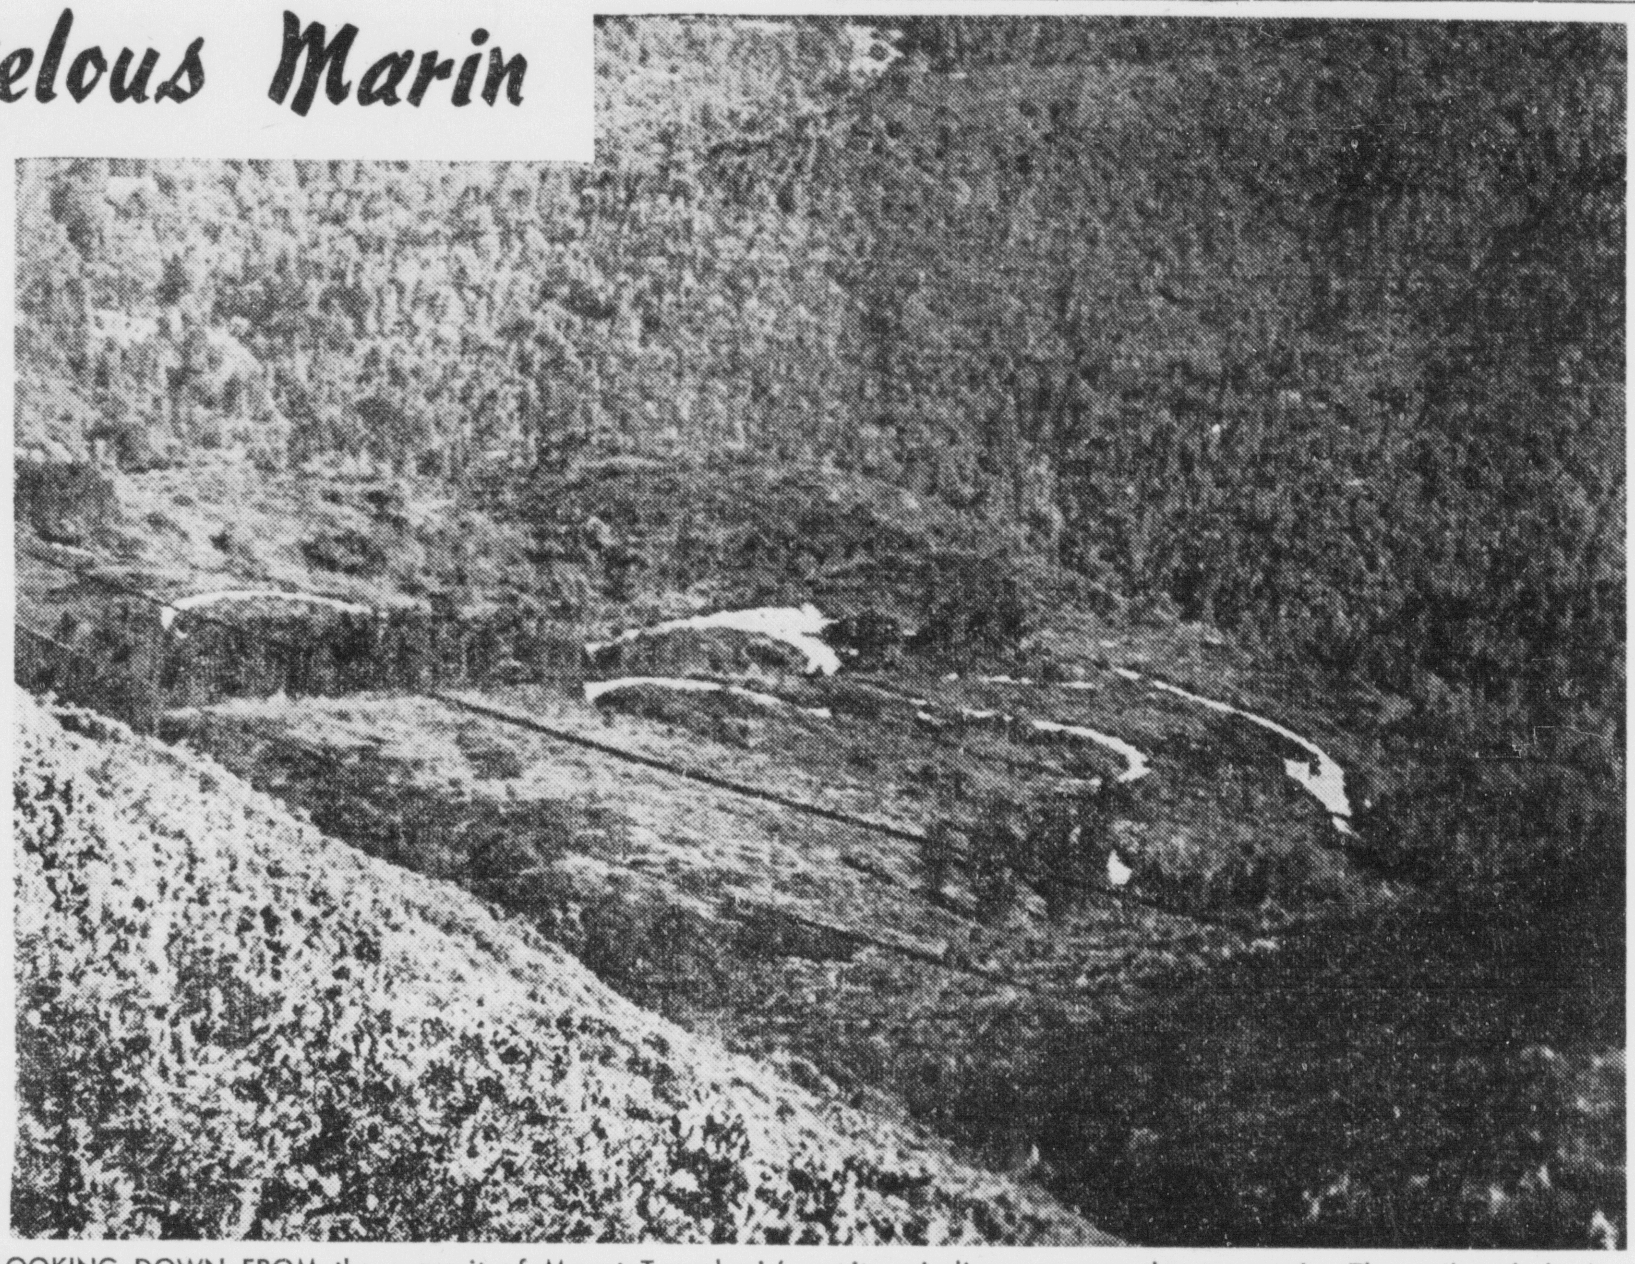
See Marvelous Marin

Mt. Tam Lures Visitors



LOOKING DOWN FROM the summit of Mount Tamalpais' East Peak you can see the world famous "double bow knot" pattern made by the old Mill Valley and Tamalpais Scenic Railroad, the crookedest railroad in the world, as it made its winding way up the mountain. The railroad, built in 1896, carried visitors up Tam until it was abandoned in 1930 following a disastrous fire of the previous year. (Independent-Journal photo)

Nearly a quarter of a million people per year—that's the estimate of the number of nature-lovers who annually visit Marin's Mount Tamalpais State Park.

Few, if any, of those visitors are disappointed with what they see.

First, there is the majesty of the mountain itself. The mountain remains Marin's most famous and most impressive landmark.

Then there are the breath-taking scenes which can be viewed from her slopes and peaks. There's the bountiful display of flora, ranging from redwood trees to delicate spring flowers, and fauna. There are trails that are ideal for riding and hiking. There are strategically-located picnicking areas. And there are facilities for overnight camping.

When negotiations now under way for the purchase of additional land in Frank's Valley and down the slopes are completed, the park proper will total 2,600 acres.

ITS MOST popular campsite is the Alice Eastwood Group Camps located just below the Mountain Home Inn, offering accommodations for 100 people. Reservations, however, must be made in advance. Popular with campers on a first-come, first-served basis, are Boot Jack, so-named because a configuration of streams there forms a Y that looks like a boot jack, and Pan Toll, so-called because it is located off Panoramic Drive and near the site of the old toll station on what was once a privately-owned road.

On East Peak, 2,586 feet above sea level, there are nine tables for picnickers beautifully located on a view terrace beneath tall trees.

If you are a saddle bag enthusiast, then a completed section of the new California Riding and Hiking Trail starting at the Mountain Home Inn and entering the park at Boot Jack is certain to interest you. The marked trail takes you through unsurpassed scenery before it ends at the junction with the Bolinas Road. It is possible, however, to continue your ride still farther on trails that lead into and through Samuel Taylor State Park.

For the hikers, Mount Tamalpais Park offers 35 miles of marked and developed trails within its confines. Most of these trails originate and radiate like spokes from a wheel from Pan Toll. The average hiking trail is three and a half miles in length, offering sweeping views and refreshing greenery.

A big attraction for rail fans is the route once traveled by "the crookedest railroad in the world." The Mill Valley and Tamalpais Scenic Railroad, built in 1896, carried visitors over a winding eight-mile route. The right-of-way serves today as a fire and hiking trail. And you can also see an old water tank or two, the platform at the site of Mesa Station and, of course, the world-famous double bow knot.

MANY OF THE passengers on the train used to stay overnight at the popular West Point Inn, which still stands today, maintained by a group of conservationists who banded together as the West Point Club. There the traveler was refreshed by mountain air and scenery and by fine food.

Many visitors first become acquainted with Mount Tamalpais State Park in the month of May when they make a pilgrimage to the Samuel Cushing Memorial Amphitheater to attend the annual Mountain Play. The spectacular pageant has been a Marin tradition since 1913 in its magnificent outdoor setting.

Not all Mount Tamalpais points of interest lie within the boundaries of the state park. For instance, West Point is on Marin Municipal Water District owned land. On East Point, also outside the park, is a Marin County Fire Department lookout station.

MIDDLE PEAK houses a repeat station for telegraph. And a U.S. government radar station sits atop West Peak.

A year-around staff of six rangers manages the park under the direction of Park Supervisor George E. Holmboe.

Their charges include, in addition to the two-legged visitors, such more permanent residents as deer, bobcats, a few mountain lions, possums, raccoons, skunks, chipmunks, squirrels, coyotes, jays, ravens, buzzards, robins, bush tits, thrush, meadow lark and garter, gopher, racer and coral king snakes. Rattlers are seldom seen. Wild azaleas, chaparral pea, tree poppy and fire lily plants abound.

And there are, of course, trees of inspiring stature.

Despite the influx of visitors in the summer Holmboe and his staff point out that Tamalpais is truly a year-around park. The visitor, no matter the season, finds much to challenge, refresh and inspire him and to cause him to return again and again to beautiful Mount Tam.

(Editor's Note: This is another in the series of "See Marvelous Marin" articles on Marin places of historic, scenic, recreational and educational interest, prepared in cooperation with radio station KTIM.)

What the Air Force wants to learn is: "Can these men take the stress and strain of faster-than-sound flight?" And the testing to determine the answer to that question is exhaustive. A Reporter Experiences Thrill Of Faster-Than-Sound Flight

But First Uncle Sam Demands Exhaustive Tests And Painstaking Preparations

By THERON NEWELL

I flew faster than sound.

I also experienced weightlessness and the force of several times my own weight pulling on me.

High above the Bay with the hills of Marin County rushing up at me, I looked ahead as the landing strip at Hamilton Air Force Base came roaring up toward me.

It seemed incredible that I had just experienced a flight that took me so easily through the sound barrier just a few years after that barrier had been conquered for the first time by man.

More incredible yet was that sensation of not having the force of gravity pull at me. Now I knew what our astronauts were talking about. I also knew the tremendous pull of several times the normal force of gravity.

WHEN THE PLANE stopped and the canopy was raised, I looked at my pilot in the front seat, Col. Marvin W. Good, commander of the 84th Fighter Interceptor Squadron. To him it was an every day occurrence, but to me it was a mighty leap into space.

It all started some months back when the orders drifted down through military circles that civilians would be allowed to ride on one of the fast, sleek F101 Voodoo first-line fighters.

Of course I wanted to ride up high and faster than sound. So my name was submitted and cleared the channels. However, first I must have a physical and go through the decompression chamber at Mather Air Force Base, Sacramento.

Just government red tape, I thought, but I'd go along with it just to get the ride in the F101.

Instead of a simple physical, I got the works. I was put through the regular Air Force physical, complete with blood test, chest X-ray, teeth, ears, heart and lung checks.

Inwardly I snorted a little at having my teeth examined just to to take a plane ride.

I was in better shape than I thought, I guess, for I passed and was given the OK to go through the decompression chamber.

Here was something that had eluded me in my lifetime of experience. I expected to go to Mather Air Force Base and sit in a chamber while it was decompressed and returned to sea level. It was not that simple.

Going into the decompression chamber was only the practical test for hours of instruction that preceded it.

A GROUP OF pilots from Hamilton Air Force Base, Army Capt. Lyle Barker of the joint office of information at Hamilton and I were given intensive training on what to expect. It was through Lt. Col. L. J. Churchville of the information office that I had my name submitted for the ride.

The training for the chamber started with a film on man's conquest of space—of his inability to live outside the small layer of air that surrounds this planet near sea level. It showed the early types of airplanes—one was a two-seat biplane of World War I vintage similar to the one I took my first ride in as a boy.

World War II was fought at altitudes of 20,000 to25,000 feet in the air. With the jet age, that ceiling has gone up and up until now man is exceeding the area where he can live.

At 10,000 to 14,000 feet a person's vision may be impaired. At 15,000 to 18,000 feet, he experiences a mild drunk feeling and his finger nails and toe nails may start to turn blue. At 20,000 to 25,000 feet he can endure a few moments before passing out. At 35,000 to 40,000 feet, a man will pass out within a few seconds.

Strategic Air Command planes now operate at more than 40,000 feet.

This then, was a survival lesson for the pilots.

I relaxed. This course was for the pilots. I was just going along for the ride.

Then the lectures began. There was the basic one on how oxygen goes through the lungs into the blood stream. With the lack of oxygen at higher elevations, an outside supply is necessary.

THIS WAS OLD stuff. I thought everyone knew this.

Above 40,000 feet, the air pressure on one's body has dropped from 14.7 pounds pressure to the square inch to 2.5 pounds to the square inch.

Above 40,000 feet, a poorly-fitted filling in a tooth may cause a throbbing toothache. Any infection, like a cold, in the sinuses will cause them to swell and press against the air passages of the nose.

Now suddenly, the pieces began to fit into the jig-saw puzzle. I could see why the thorough examination. This was going to affect me.

At 40,000 feet, the bases created by the digestion of food swelled nine times. At 50,000 feet, they would swell 17 times normal size. They would press against the abdomen walls, they would press against the diaphram so that one could hardly breathe.

Unless corrected time and time again by any of three methods demonstrated, the pressure on the ear drums would become unendurable. I had experienced plugged ears many times in the mountains.

Hypoxia was a word used over and over again. It deals with the lack of oxygen on the system. It does not affect any two people the same. Hence, one has to experience it to know when the high altitude is starting to make him unconscious. We would have to experience that for ourselves in order to know.

After lunch, we spent more than an hour with P. D. McCripe. He is a friend to all pilots. With him they check their oxygen equipment. P stands for pressure; D for diaphrams; M for masks; C for connections to the mask; C for connections to the oxygen supply; R for the regulator; I for indicator; P for pressure; E for the emergency bottle of oxygen.

By the time the instructor got down to the E for emergency equipment and bailing out, he was showing us how we would have to make the change from regular oxygen supply in the decompression chamber to bottle oxygen to simulate being ejected from a plane in an emergency.

That thought hadn't hit me. Yes, I might have to face

You Have To Be Fit For This Flight

AN ASSISTANT HOOKS UP a pilot into his oxygen mask and supply inside the decompression chamber at Mather Air Force Base. The pilot is preparing for one of the several tests he must pass inside that chamber before he will be permitted to fly faster than sound. Independent-Journal reporter Theron Newell was required to pass those same tests before he was allowed to participate in a flight that broke the sound barrier. (Air Force photo)

such an emergency on the flight, so I'd better be prepared.

WE HAD TO LEAVE our watches, pens or anything else that a change in pressure would affect. Then into the decompression chamber we went.

Inside, we received final instructions. If we felt pain, we were to extend our arm. If it was a small pain, we were to put out one finger and point to the area hurting, so corrective measures could be taken. If it was a greater pain, two fingers would bring help from the assistants within the chamber. Three fingers meant that we could no longer endure the pain and wanted out of the chamber.

We were fitted with oxygen masks and given a final briefing on what to expect. We loosened our belts and trousers so that our abdomens could expand at 43,000 feet, the upper limits of our simulated flight.

For about 10 minutes we were fed pure oxygen so that we could become accustomed to the equipment and to help build up the oxygen supply in our blood.

The first simulated flight was a quick one. We were taken to 5,000 feet and immediately plunged to 1,500 feet. This was to test our ears' ability to withstand the sudden pressures.

With much swallowing and blowing with my nose and mouth closed, my ears stayed unplugged.

Then it was up and up. We leveled off at 25,000 feet for a few minutes to become accustomed to it.

Again we went up and up into the simulated rarefied atmosphere. At 43,000 feet my abdomen was being pushed out with stomach cramps. Even against my will, gas was escaping from both ends of my digestive track. (We had been forewarned that it happens to everyone and was only normal, or we could not stand the change in pressure.)

We were brought back down to the pressure of 25,000 feet. Here we were divided into teams of two. We had to remove our oxygen masks so that we could experience hypoxia. Each team member had to write until he began losing control of his faculties.

A PILOT TAKES OFF his oxygen mask in the rarefied air at 25,000 feet inside the decompression chamber at Mather Air Force Base. He is testing his ability to withstand hypoxia—the lack of oxygen in the system. (Air Force photo)

MY TEAMMATE started writing, "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party." Twice he wrote that and, on the third time, gave up. The letters were two inches high at the end of his writing. I put his mask back on and gave him oxygen until he recovered.

Then I took off my mask. I too continued to write the same thing. Five times I wrote it as I got drunker. It was the same feeling I had experienced at trying to climb steep mountains between the 12,000 and 14,000 foot level. I knew then how hypoxia would affect me, so I put on my mask.

We were brought back to the pressure of an airplane cabin at 8,000 feet. Our last test would be a rapid decompression test. It would simulate the effect of having to bail out of a plane at 22,000 feet from the pressurized cabin.

A small room at one end of the chamber was kept at 8,000 feet pressure. The larger room was decompressed to 30,000 feet elevation pressure. When a valve was opened electrically, the air would rush from our chamber into the larger one, reducing our pressure to 22,000 feet within a fraction of a second.

We were told how we must fasten our masks and use the bottled oxygen, the same is if we were in a parachute.

THERE WAS a deafening blast as the air rushed out and a cloud of fog enveloped us. Pain hit my ears like someone sticking two knives in them at once. My chest and abdomen expanded momentarily. Then my body adjusted. I put on my mask, breathing the bottled oxygen.

The test was over. I received my certificate that I had passed and was eligible for my F101 ride.

With A Future Architect In Europe—

These Structures Caught Eye Of Traveling Marinite

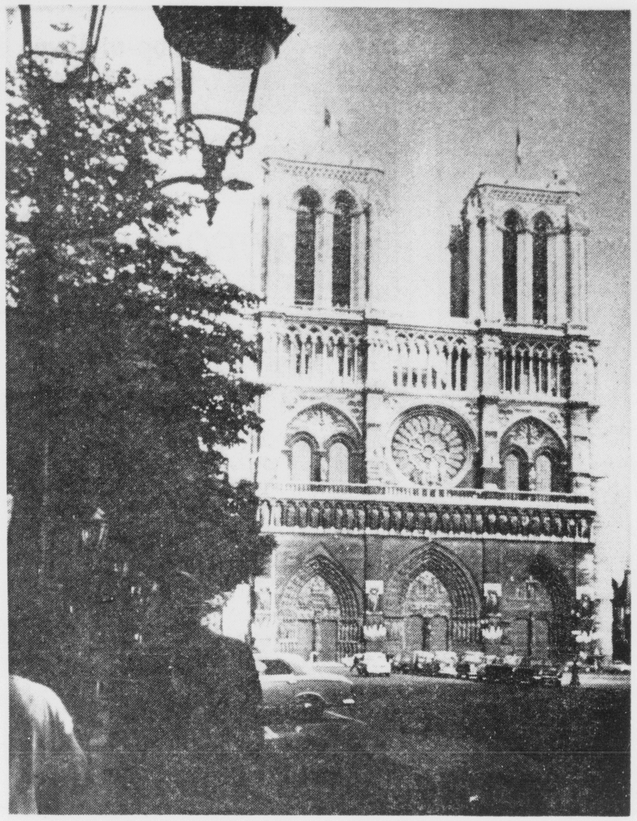
What impresses the American tourist the most in Europe?

Very likely the answer depends upon the visitor's special interests.

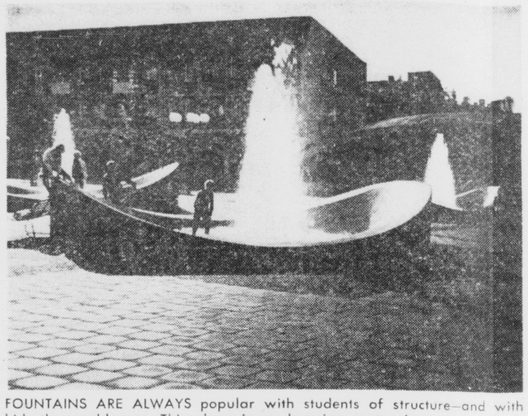
Case in point: Cliff Hanssen of Fairfax. He's an architectural school graduate, currently a designer-draftsman with the architectural firm of Gromme & Priestley in San Rafael and planning to ultimately set out on his own as a practicing architect.

So when Hanssen and wife Dotty visited Europe, it was natural that his interest was focussed primarily upon structures — their forms and patterns.

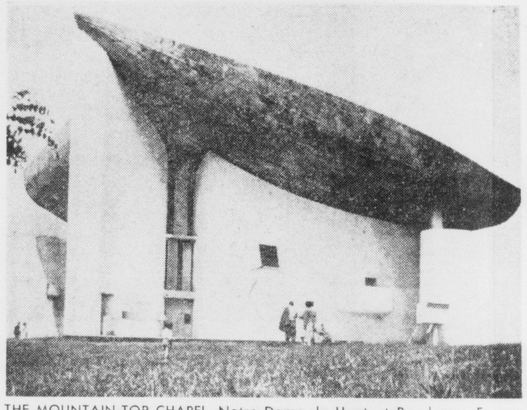
That interest is reflected in these photographs of Hanssen's slides made while in Europe.



OF NOTRE DAME CATHEDRAL in Paris, standing on an island in the Seine River, Cliff Hanssen says: "It is one of the few buildings in Europe you can really stand back and look at. From the architectural standpoint, it is a perfect balance of art and structure with each complementing the other."

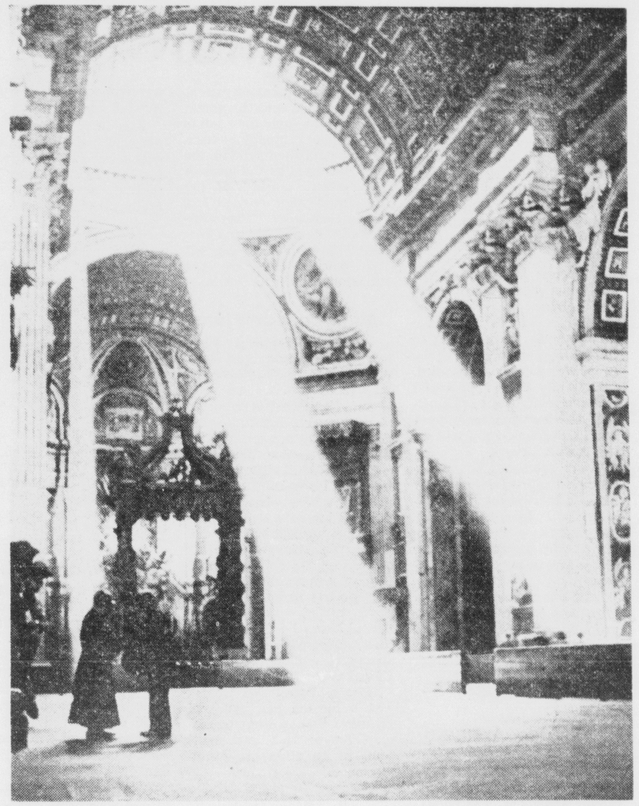


FOUNTAINS ARE ALWAYS popular with students of structure—and with kids the world over. This plaza in a shopping center in a new suburb outside of Stockholm, Sweden, pleased the Hanssens.

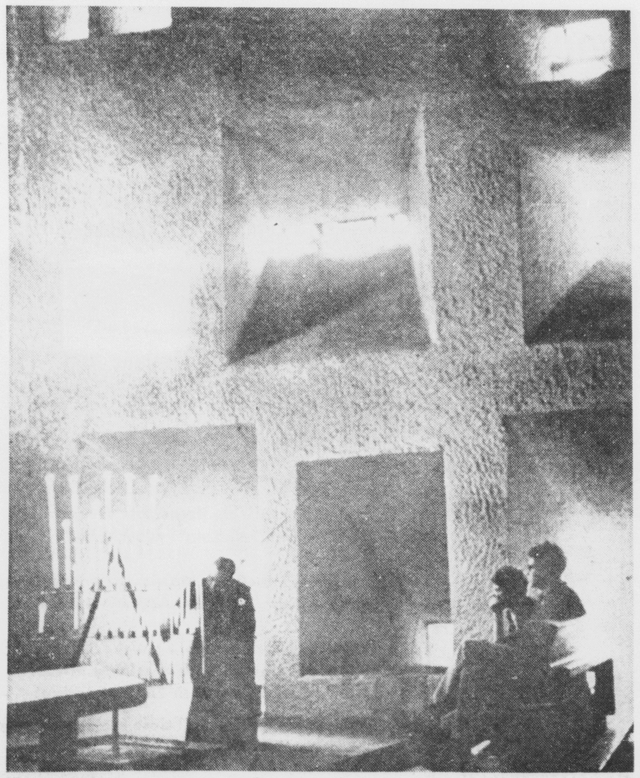


THE MOUNTAIN-TOP CHAPEL, Notre Dame du Haut at Ronchamp, France, is praised by Cliff Hanssen as "completely original in every respect, breaking all the accepted rules and traditions. It is rare, indeed, in architecture that this approach produces more than mere novelty. Probably no one but the talented Corbusier could have made this building a success."

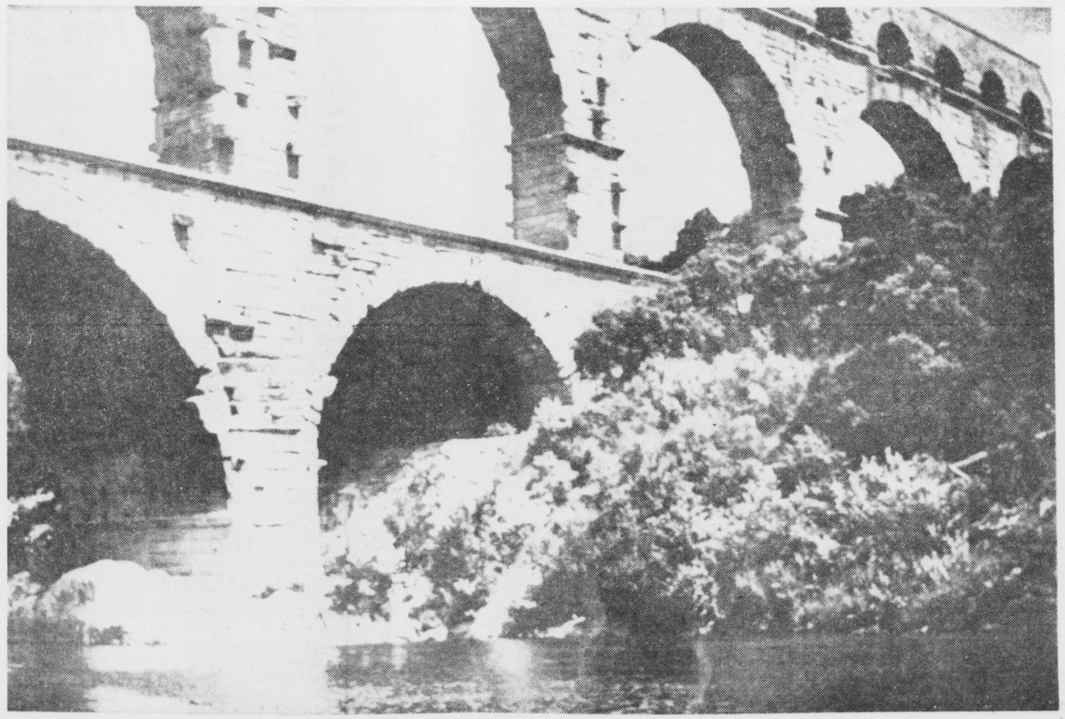
THE TOWN WATERTOWER can be an eyesore. But that certainly wasn't true at Orebro, 100 miles west of Stockholm. Cliff Hanssen found the structure not only beautiful, but a further attraction in that there are a restaurant and observation deck at the top.



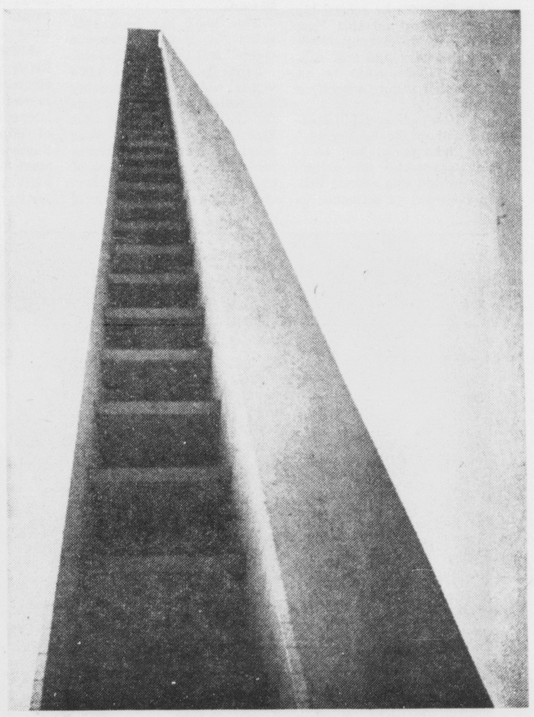
THIS PHOTOGRAPH which Cliff Hanssen shot surreptitiously is magnificent in color. The canopy over St. Peter's tomb, behind the two figures, is seven stories high. Hanssen says the baroque decoration is on such a scale and so dramatic that one cannot really appreciate the size of the majestic interior of St. Peter's in Rome.



THE RONCHAMP CHAPEL is illuminated with small windows of stained glass set in thick rubble walls. Hanssen's interest was stimulated by the striking pattern created by the glow upon the flat faces of the niches caused by the color of the glass. Designed by Le Corbusier, the structure is sometimes hailed as "the greatest building of our time," and Hanssen, at first skeptical, was much impressed by it.



PONT DU GARD AT NIMES, FRANCE, was of special interest to Marinite Cliff Hanssen because it is felt by many people to have been the source of inspiration for the late Frank Lloyd Wright for his design for the new Marin County Civic Center. The Roman-built aqueduct is 2,000 years old and carried water from distant hills across the Gard River Valley to Roman outposts at Nimes and Arles. It is, Hanssen believes, one of the finest examples of the arch as developed by the Romans.



THE PIRELLI BUILDING at Milan, Italy, causes the viewer gazing at one end of the tall, thin office structure to feel that the architect treated the edifice as if he were building a huge piece of sculpture, according to Hanssen.

BOOK REVIEWS

Novelist Tells Of A Shameful Chapter In American History

THE EVERLASTING FIRE by Jonreed Lauritzen, Doubleday and Co., 474 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This novel, billed as a major one, deals with one of the most shameful chapters in American history—the bitter persecution of the Mormons in the period before the Civil War.

Lauritzen has covered the strife between Mormon and non-Mormon in Illinois, the murder of Joseph Smith, the ascent of Brigham Young to leadership and the start of the great Mormon trek westward.

Certainly here is material for a stirring story. Lauritzen, however, handles it poorly. This is especially true of the early chapters.

There seems to be an absence of inspiration—a lack of fire—in the writing. The dialogue is awkward and does not ring true. Behavior patterns, too, appear unlikely. Characters seem to be caricatures.

Lauritzen does pick up some momentum as the book progresses and his later chapters are much better written and more exciting. The weaknesses are still there, but to a much lesser degree.

HOW TO SUCCEED IN BUSINESS WITHOUT REALLY TRYING by Shepard Mead, Ballantine Books Inc., 148 pages, 50-cent paperback. Reviewed by Catherine M. O'Toole.

The world of Madison Avenue is Shepherd Mead's domain.

For 20 years he served his apprenticeship on this New York City street that developed the hard and soft sell, raising salesmanship to an art whether selling oneself or a product.

In "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," Mead hilariously but accurately chronicles the philosophy behind this avenue that has extended its influence to almost every facet of American life. Mead runs the gamut from how to apply for a job to how to play company politics.

First published in 1956, the book was used as the basis of a Broadway musical of the same name that opened last year. Subtitled "The Dastard's Guide to Fame and Fortune," it maintains the wit and sparkle that are the trademark of a Mead book.

Malayan Adventure

THE PASANG RUN by Elleston Trevor, Harper and Row, 248 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This new novel is superbly written, packed with excitement, high adventure, romance and human drama.

The colorful setting is the isolated town of Pasang in Malaya where young Hugh Copland has been sent to manage the rundown airport. There he struggles against cobra and tiger, jungle and heat, Communist terrorists and gloomy memories of the past.

And there he finds a new love and people of admirable strengths—whites, Malayans, Chinese.

If the conclusion seems just a bit too pat, you will be more than willing to forgive Trevor this one small fault in an otherwise excellent novel.

Lewis lists more than 5,000 words which are commonly misspelled and the reasons for the correct spelling plus hints to fix them in your mind. He further provides some 130 simplified rules of spelling. And there are special sections on such subjects as hyphenating compounds, irregular plurals, etc.

It is all arranged in a manner that makes for quick and easy usage. Here's a real find for the person unsure of his spelling and desirous of correcting that weakness.

Gentleman Sleuth

REPENT AT LEISURE by Rae Foley, Dodd, Mead & Co., 213 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This run-of-the-mill mystery relies entirely too heavily upon unlikely coincidences and relationships to prove satisfactory to most devotees of the detective story.

Hiram Potter, gentleman detective, is involved in blackmail and murder. But the plotting is unimaginative. And there's little to lift the story above the category of ordinary.

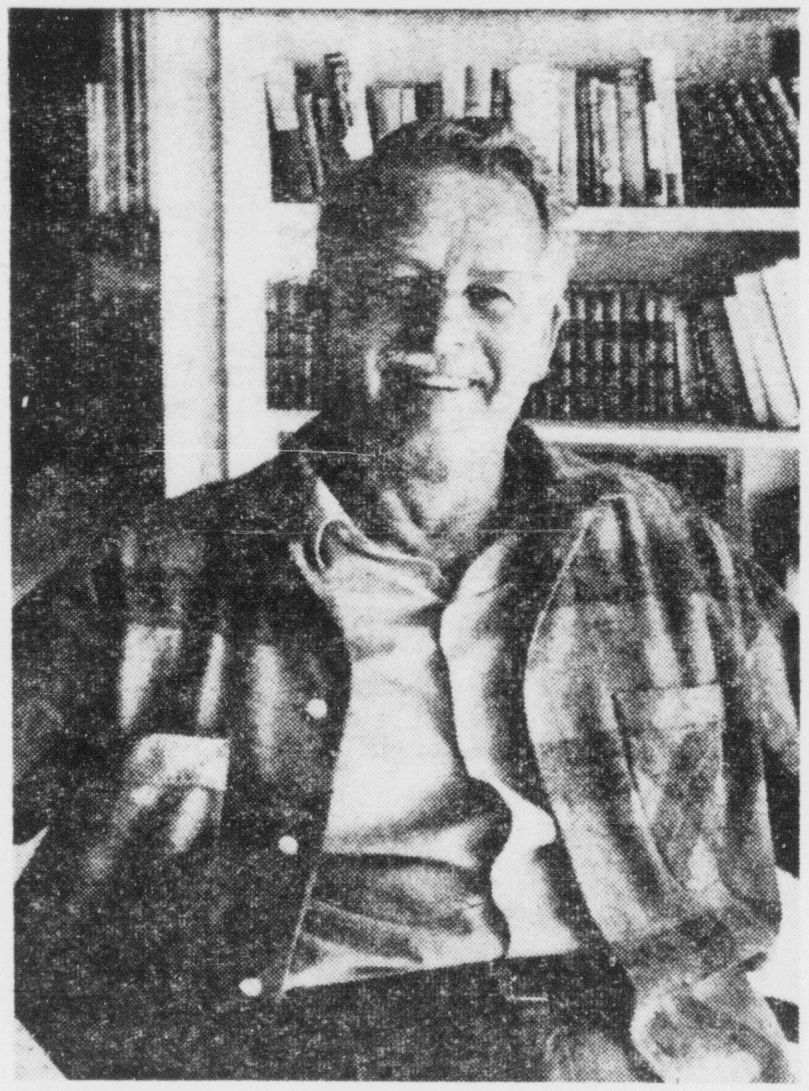
Familiar Theme

DAVID KNUDSEN by George P. Elliott, Random House, 339 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The young man struggling to find his way past the peculiar pitfalls posed by today's society is a popular subject with our current novelists. Here's another entry in that field—and it's a pretty good one.

George Elliott, author of "Parktilden Village," gives photographer David Knudsen, the central figure of his second novel, one very special problem in addition to the usual travails. Knudsen becomes a victim of radiation sickness.

Elliott succeeds in making his story of Knudsen's desperate, often mis-directed, efforts to restore meaning to his existence a considerable degree of impact and authenticity. Furthermore, the San Francisco locale gives the novel a built-in geographical appeal for Bay Area residents.



SON OF A MORMON mother, Jonreed Lauritzen is author of the new novel, "The Everlasting Fire," about the persecution of the Saints and the start of their great trek westward. He is a resident of Thousand Oaks, Calif.

THE PAPERBACKS

TV Takes A Drubbing In Book By Sociologist

TV IN AMERICA by Meyer Weinberg, Ballantine Books, 311 pages, 75 cents. Reviewed by Don Keown.

In this original paperback subtitled "The Morality of Hard Cash" sociologist-historian-teacher Meyer Weinberg gives the television industry the worst drubbing it has yet received from a critic.

He delves deeply into the quiz show scandals, deceptive commercials, sponsor control over programming, the preoccupation of the men who control the networks and produce the shows with commercialization, payola and plugola, and the pathetic inepitude of federal agencies and lawmakers in their halfhearted attempts to regulate the users of the public airwaves.

He sweeps aside the platitudes uttered by the spokesmen for the industry and judges them instead on performance. And he convicts them of a contempt for the public's intelligence and of an overruling greed for profit.

But he is fair enough to note that television's deficiencies are not unique to that industry. They are the same weaknesses that permeate our entire society — stemming from an absence of firm and uplifting moral values. And Weinberg questions the fairness of making television the scapegoat for that condition.

There is support for Walter Lippmann's suggestion that a competing non-commercial network be set up to handle the cultural and informative aspects of TV that he feels the commercial networks have neglected. Lippmann proposed that such a network be financed by rent paid by commercial stations for their use of the airwaves.

There is also considerable backing in Weinberg's book for closer governmental regulation of television despite cries of censorship. The industry, he feels, has failed in self-regulation.

Apparent to this reader was the fact that the Bay Area is more fortunate than most regions in its television fare. It has non-commercial station KQED already offering something of the kind of programming proposed by Lippmann, although on a severely restricted budget. And the management of two of its commercial stations, KPIX and KRON, have shown a greater interest in locally-developed public affairs programs than has been generally true of such stations across the country.

Spy Thriller

BLIND GAMBIT by James Reach, Collier Books, 187 pages, 95 cents. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This spy novel, in paperback, reminds us of the B pictures that Hollywood used to grind out about foreign intrigue—you know, the ones that pitted Bulldog Drummond or Mister Moto against all kinds of sinister opposing agents.

They were corny and completely unrealistic. But they were also lively and interesting.

And quite often you found yourself enjoying them despite your realization that it was all pretty nonsensical.

So it is with this story about a naive New Yorker caught in an unlikely battle of wits and worse between Communist and non-Communist Russians. It may not be a sound story and certainly is not significant. But it is entertaining and excellent escapist reading. Which is just what a spy thriller should be.

MARKING THE 80TH BIRTHDAY of the great composer Igor Stravinsky, the recording companies have been releasing albums of his works at a prolific rate. On this page in the second of two articles, Marin Magazine columnist John Sunier discusses some of those new Stravinsky releases.

STEREO NOTES

Some More On Stravinsky Recordings Just Released

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, Bay FM & Cultural Guide

We continue from last week's column with a look at the remaining five of nine brand new recordings honoring Igor Stravinsky's 80th birthday.

"The Pulcinella Suite" and "Concerto for Piano and Wind Orchestra" are contained on a Columbia Stereo MS 6329.

Leonard Bernstein conducts the New York Philharmonic in these two likeable works from the composer's neo-classic period. The former work is a balletic "portrait" of the old Italian composer Pergolesi. Bernstein wields a light and deft touch on these delicate musical creations of Stravinsky's pen. Seymor Lipkin delivers a crisp piano reading in the Concerto.

Isaac Stern is the soloist in the major Stravinsky work, the "Violin Concerto in D Major," written in 1931 (Columbia Stereo MS 6331). The "Symphony in Three Movements" is also featured on this stereodisc.

The violin concerto is not a virtuostic work and has more of a chamber texture than any of the great masters' violin concerti. The ballet, "Balustrade," was created by George Balanchine from this music. The symphony, composed in 1945, was inspired by newsreels of the war, and concludes with the most Hollywoodish chord imaginable in one of the most unexpected musical endings ever penned. "Works for Two Pianos" and "Four Hands' is the over-all title of Columbia Stereo MS 6333, performed by pianists Gold and Fizdale.

Specific selections heard are the "Concerto for Two Solo Pianos" (1935), "The Sonata for Two Pianos," and "Eight Easy pieces for Piano Four-Hands."

The concerto is of symphonic proportions and a truly striking work that bears repeated listening, as do any Stravinsky works. The other piano pieces are not quite as interesting, but all are superbly played by Gold and Fizdale.

The London Record subsidiary, L'Oiseau-Lyre, brings us on Stereo SOL 60050 the "Dumbarton Oaks" concerto for chamber orchestra, "Danses Concertantes," and the "Concerto in D for String Orchestra."

Colin Davis conducts the English Chamber Orchestra in these Stravinsky works penned between 1938 and 1946, all in the neo-classic style. The chamber orchestra is employed in the concertante manner — with small groupings of instruments pitted against each other, resulting in clear and sharp musical line and form. The "Dumbarton Oaks" concerto is based upon Bach's "Brandenburg Concerti," and the "Concerto for String Orchestra" is one of the most lyrical of Stravinsky's creations.

Finally we have the just-released soundtrack to the CBS premiere television production of last month, "The Flood." This Biblical allegory was a milestone in television, a work conceived by Stravinsky especially for the medium, and entirely supervised by the composer from the setting of the first note on paper to the final fade-out into a Breck's commercial at the end of the program. It uses everything in the book to tell the story of the Creation, the Battle in Heaven, the Banishment from Eden, and Noah and his Ark.

The music is Stravinsky at his most modern, but the narration and dialogue — adding drama and explanation — make it somehow quite easy to listen to. In spite of the intruding commercials, this was one of television's greatest hours.

The flip side presents Stravinsky's "Mass" composed in 1948, in an excellent interpretation by the Columbia Symphony, with woodwinds and chorus, again conducted by the composer. (Columbia Stereo MS 6357).

Here's One Solution To Privacy Problem

Baffle Screens Urged If Homes Built Too Close

WHEN NEIGHBORING HOUSES are too close for comfort, a baffle screen arrangement such as this can provide needed privacy for each home. Two offset screens are designed in a board-on-board pattern with decorative crown that acts as a trellis for climbers. Here Douglas fir baffles have been painted a sage green. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

Friendliness with one's neighbors is a fine thing. But when you pay unintentional visits to them via the windows because your houses are built too closely together, that's carrying a good thing too far.

Lots of home owners find themselves in this predicament. But what do you do about it?

If you hang heavy curtains at the windows, you might as well not have windows. If you put in a big hedge, you'll have to keep it clipped.

A good solution to the problem is to have a confab with the folks next door and then each erect a baffle screen, one in your yard and one in theirs.

The baffles will be built three feet or more apart, but ends will overlap. Each baffle will be half the length of the house on the side where the baffles are to be placed. The length could also be extended to provide some screening for the backyard or to block an uncomplimentary view of the neighboring house from the backyard.

A board-on-board pattern is ideal for the baffles and it is easy to build.

Set the fence posts, which should be four-by-four in size, then attach top and bottom rails using two-by-fours. For the pattern, nail one-by-fours vertically to the rails, but nail alternating boards on opposite sides of the baffle and overlap their ends one inch. When all one-by-fours are in place, add a two-by-six cap board to give it a finished appearance.

If you like, add a crown above the cap board and use it as a trellis for a flowering vine.

It's important to make the baffles a part of the garden. This is easily done by banking shrubs or flowers against the screens. Put your "show" plants here because the baffles will form the perfect backdrop to set them off.

Choose a wood with good outdoor performance for the baffles. Either western red cedar or Douglas fir will fill the bill.

THIS BACKYARD SUMMER HOUSE combines the prized features of exotic appearance, complete livability and easy construction. The wooden floor, which neither reflects nor retains heat, is built slightly above ground level so that there is no contact with the earth. Beams are set in concrete footing which rises four inches above ground and extends 12 inches below for stability. Deck boards are two-by-four or two-by-sixes of either Douglas fir or redwood. The boards are spaced a quarter inch apart to provide adequate drainage for rain water. Walls are extended as perimeter fencing and serve to screen the summer house from neighboring yards. Roof is positioned to shade at least part of the deck during the hot hours and is slanted to let rain water run off. A simple post and beam framing has been covered with yellow fiberglass. Accessories can include benches, fireplace for barbecuing and bonfires, a firepit in ground adjacent to the deck, table or serving counter, and cupboards and closets for storage. And don't forget the lighting. (West Coast Lumbermen's Assn. photo)

Summer In The Garden

It's Lazy Time Of Year, But There Is Work

For Marin gardeners, the good old summer time is a lazy time of the year. It is a season to enjoy that which has already been wrought or to rue that which might have been.

The wise gardener, however, is not content with resting on his laurels. He knows that certain calls to duty should be answered if his garden is to offer continued enjoyment. These are largely in the line of maintenance, but not entirely.

Late summer and fall color can be planted now, as can certain trees and shrubs which actually prefer midsummer planting to any other.

Water is the one most important thing to attend to. Given water, any garden can be made to look fresh, even if color is lacking. It's so easy to let an extra day or two go by between waterings that every gardener should follow in a regular schedule. Watering, after all, is a relatively simple matter, especially with the assorted accessories which any nurseryman or garden supply dealer has to offer.

ALSO IN THE maintenance line, the matter of neatness is a top contributor to garden enjoyment. Just as a messy house lacks charm, so the ragged garden is less easy to relax in.

Hoe down faded foliage of spring-blooming bulbs, uproot faded annuals and, of course, get rid of weeds. In place of these, plant the heat-loving bedders for late summer and fall color. In the bedding plant line, salvia is good. So, too, is cockscomb, verbena, zinnia and marigold. Dwarf dahlias are quick-color shots in the arm, and petunias can still be counted on for plenty of bloom.

Crowded clumps of bearded iris may be lifted and divided, and new varieties may be obtained in the nursery for planting this month. Give them a sun-drenched spot and work up a deep bed, with steer manure down under for the roots to anchor in. Keep new iris plantings watered until they are well established.

Other than bedders and iris, nurseries are alive with color from such summer standbys as tuberous begonias, fuchsias, chrysanthemums and roses, all of which provide instant color for the needy garden.

PLANTS THAT prefer midsummer planting to any other include the citrus family's varied array of orchard-size and dwarf trees, plus guavas, avocados and other sub-tropical fruits.

Bougainvillea and hibiscus also prefer warm weather planting. All should be well watered in to start them on their way and citrus should have exposed trunks wrapped with burlap to prevent their sunburning.

If you are a would-be vegetable gardener, snap beans, squash, beets, carrots, chard and radishes can all be planted from seed for late harvest, while plants of pepper, eggplant and tomatoes are available in most nurseries. As we say, these are among the things which may be planted now, if you choose to interrupt your siesta.

On the other hand, there are a few more maintenance jobs that the careful gardener will definitely not want to postpone.

Lawn care is something that rewards us with real pleasure. Rundown lawns, like rugged flower beds are no fun to live with and unnecessary as well. Cutting, watering, feeding and weeding are not time consuming when regularly attended to. They make so much difference, too.

ALSO IN THE maintenance line, is the feeding of other hungry mouths in the garden. Azaleas and camellias should have their mid-summer booster of acid fertilizer. Roses, like humans, should be fed on a regular schedule — every three weeks or so. Chrysanthemums and dahlias have monumental appetites and will perform so much better when they are satisfied in this way. Begonias, fuchsias and hibiscus also respond to well balanced meals on regular schedules.

And lastly, there's the matter of pest control.

Roses are the primary recipients of our attention, needing spray control for the various bugs which pay them call as well as for mildew and (in certain areas) for rust. Tuberous begonias, also, are subject to mildew which is easily controlled with the proper spray, while under certain cool summer conditions, grape myrtle and lilac both fight the mildew battle.

Mildew is more easily prevented than cured and should be attended to when the first spot shows up.

DRAMATIC USE OF ornamental screen blocks was achieved at the Abe Blumenfeld home at Paradise Cay in the design by architects Severin and Miller Associates of San Rafael. The pattern shown is one of many that can be obtained with Cosmo II Haydite screen block, an original design manufactured exclusively by the McNear Co. of San Rafael. (Photo by Lloyd A. DeMers)

HEDGE TRIMMERS should be sturdily constructed to withstand thousands of opening and closing shocks. Clean cuts are assured by long, sharp steel blades, making possible the sculptured look of neatly-trimmed hedges.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Encourage larger blooms on Dahlias by pinching outside buds. Water and feed Dahlias regularly.
- Taking long stems when cutting is good practice with established roses. It will further stimulate growth of long stem roses.
- All container grown shrubs and trees may be set out now. No need to wait for fall.
- Feed lawns frequently and lightly rather than vice versa. A more even growth will result.
- Potted Geraniums stand more water than many people give them. Every other day is none too often for watering these.

STICKY STICKY DRIP

This time of year, a common problem is sticky "drip" falling from Oak trees. This could be a harmless condition which will stop when acorns drop.

However, this symptom can also be caused by either Lecanium Scale or Aphis. Both are dangerous to trees. You may wish an inspection—just to make sure. Sohner experts are happy to do so, at no cost or obligation.

A Retirement Home In The Reedlands

Kentuckians Enjoy New Way Of Life In View House On A Marin Hillside

The John Hellstroms of Kentucky looked to Marin County, the ideal retirement spot, for their new home.

And three years ago they selected their site—a sloping hillside lot in Reedlands off the Belvedere-Tiburon Highway.

To design, engineer and construct their two-level redwood home they chose the William H. McDevitt Building Co. of San Rafael.

What they wanted — and what they got—was a comfortable, compact contemporary house offering an ample amount of space and taking full advantage of the superb view of the bay starting with Harbor Point, covering the two bridges and San Francisco and circling back to the Richmond hills.

A wedge-shaped deck with a windbreak runs around the glass walls of the living room on the upper level which is entered from the street. Adorning it is a stunning mosaic table, the handiwork of Mrs. Hellstrom, who thus adds further color and warmth to the profusion of potted plants.

THE OUTDOOR landscaping, by Ernest Wertheim, features native California plants for easy maintenance and natural beauty. Ice plant covers one portion of the bank, and manzanita, the tea tree and the star acacia are also used artfully.

Gracious hospitality is reflected in the entry hall which is huge in relation to the compact home. A large living-dining room gives plenty of space for entertaining as it opens to the view balcony.

Instead of a massive dining room set, Mrs. Hellstrom has furnished the dining end lightly with a flip-top Danish teak game table.

The cantilevered cast cement hearth provided seating space with inviting cushions in gay colors. Haydite was chosen for the fireplace itself. Over the fireplace is an unusual ship's model which Hellstrom's father brought over from Sweden. Charm and comfort is apparent everywhere from the two stone green leather pull-up chairs by the fireplace to the traditional sofa in rock coral. The natural, rough-textured draw draperies in the living area are appropriate. Behind the sofa is a built-in bookcase containing all the requirements for a successful night at home.

OPENING FROM the living-dining room is a cheerful study which doubles as a guest room. On one side is a storage wall which contains a desk-stereo hi-fi, television, books and shelves which display a stunning collection of old German pewter steins, bowls, pitchers and trays. A Japanese oval straw rug adds individuality.

The contemporary Norwegian couches serve as twin beds when guests are present.

An adjoining bathroom is tastefully decorated in peach with formica countertop and beige vinyl floor.

Off the main living areas is a compact kitchen and dinette area—almost ship's style, although it does have two ovens for easy entertaining. Mrs. Hellstrom believes in functional furnishings as one notes from the vinyl floors which run throughout the entire house with the exception of the kitchen which is in soft gold tessera to match the gold enameled ovens. A stainless steel countertop shines.

McDevitt had the home architecturally designed with all-beam ceilings to tie in with the all-redwood driftwood stained walls in the interior which Mrs. Hellstrom wanted for ease of upkeep. Exterior color of the house is the same so that it all flows together and creates an indoor-outdoor look.

From the spacious entry hall an open staircase leads to the lower level where two master-size bedrooms each have their own bath and dressing room and lavish closet space. Muted green tile and a terra cotta vinyl floor make a colorful bath for the owners. The other bath is in the soft aqua blue tones to complement the wood.

A Home For Fun, Comfort

Hellstroms Find Their Reedlands Residence Ideal

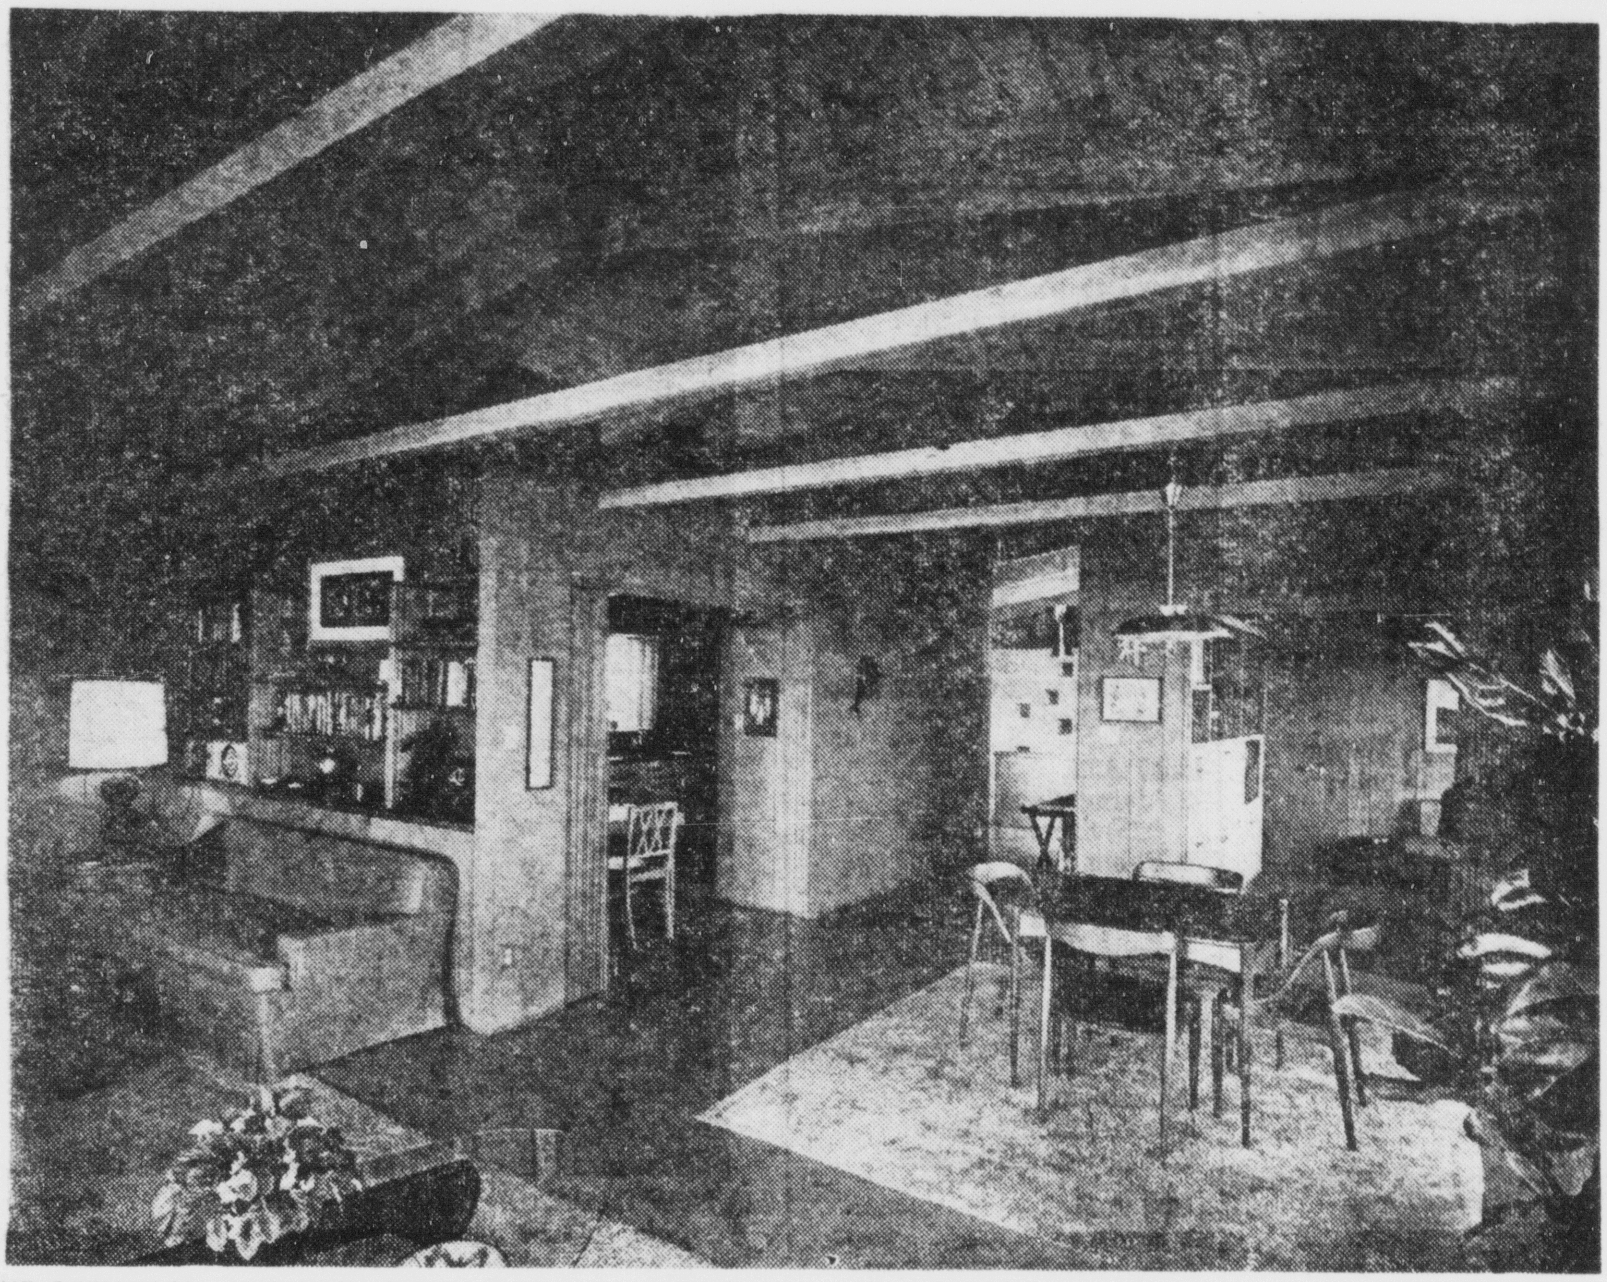
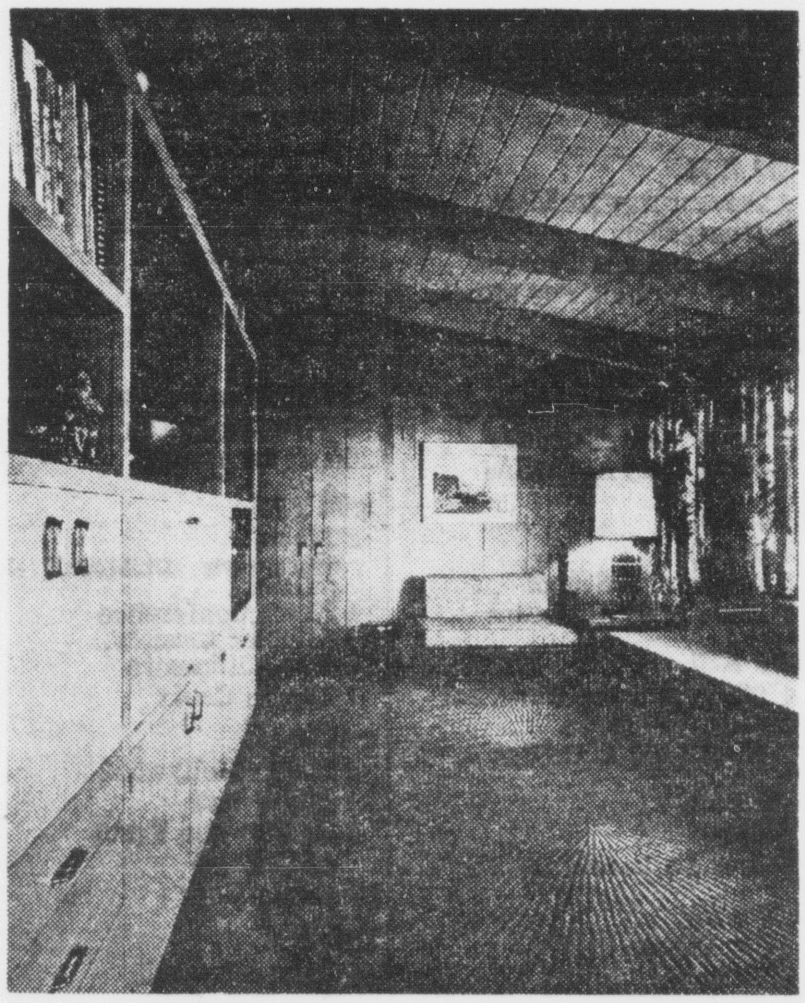
in the Reedlands is the hideaway studio under the two-car garage. Here Mrs. Hellstrom, who once worked professionally as a medical artist, follows her new hobbies of modelling in clay and wood sculpture.

THE HELLSTROMS are perfectly happy in California although it was a complete transition from their former way of life. And they speak highly of their McDevitt home which Mrs. Hellstrom says "is just what we want—time for fun and hobbies and easy to keep."

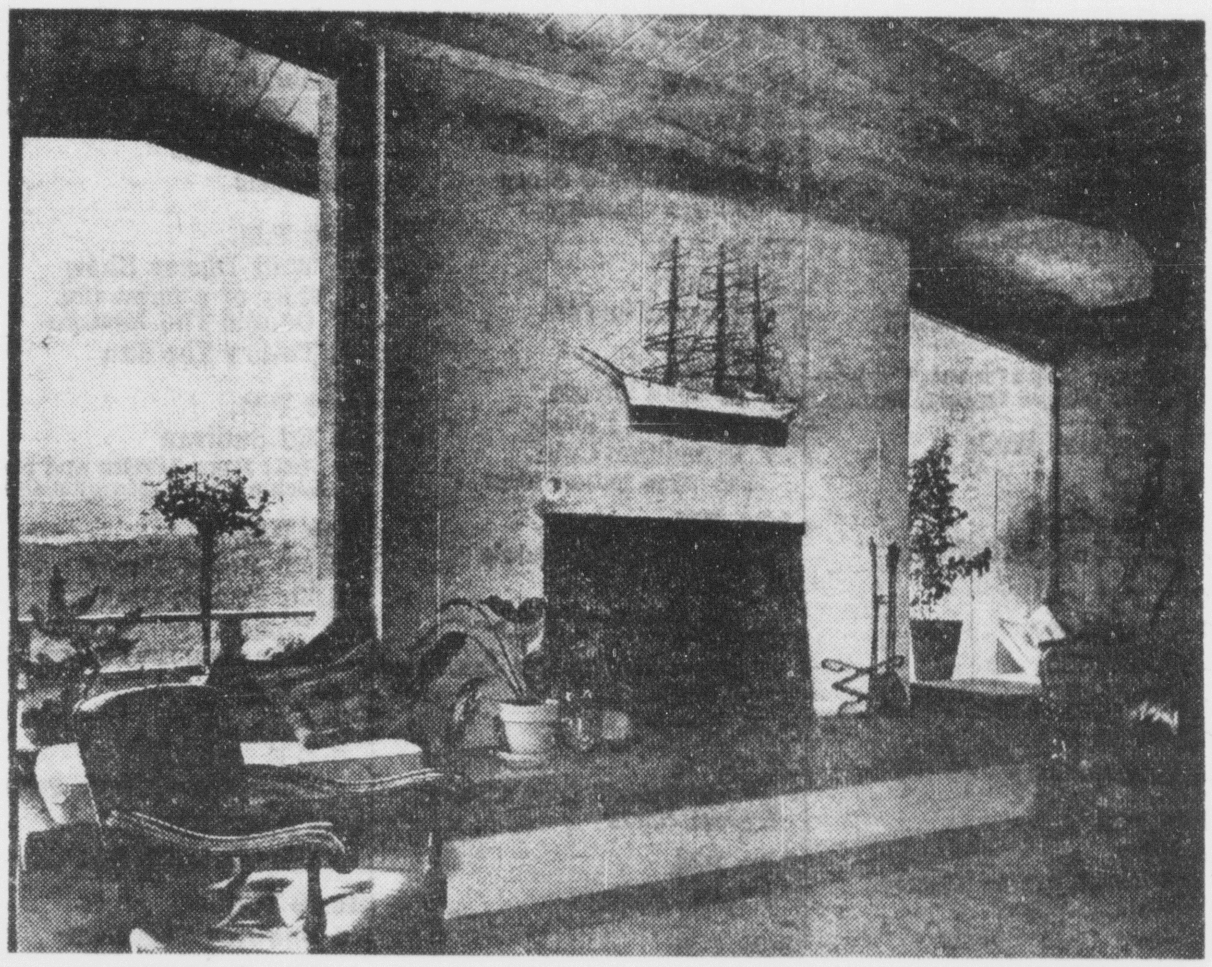
They also bask in the assurance that their splendid view is one that can never be cut off by other construction because of the good site orientation.



THE OPEN PLAN AND EASY FLOW of the John Hellstrom home in Reedlands is strikingly apparent in this photograph. There is generous space for entertaining, and the living-dining area opens to the view balcony. The Hellstroms, Kentuckians, selected Marin County as their retirement home three years ago. It is, they say, a decision they have never regretted.



THIS ROOM WITH its generous storage, contemporary couches and all-wood walls can serve the Hellstroms as either a cozy retreat or a practical guest room. Part of an extensive collection of old pewter barely shows.



THE CANTILEVERED hearth of the fireplace in the Hellstrom home is an inviting place. Note the unusual model ship which hangs over the fireplace. It was brought from Sweden by Hellstrom's father.

"CAN CLOTHES BE CLEANED TOO OFTEN?"

We could offer a lot of words in reply to your question, but none would be more effective or authoritative than this quotation from the London, England, trade magazine, "TAILOR & CUTTER."

"There is an enormous amount of smoke, dirt and grit in the atmosphere and this penetrates into the actual fibres of the suiting. After a while the dirt, instead of being removed by brushing, is pressed further into the material and causes it to become hard. This transition is gradual, however, and people do not notice the cloth becoming sticky. The dirt must be coaxed out at regular intervals; otherwise, no amount of cleaning will remove it entirely. Without this maintenance a suit is not being treated properly and it is unfair to your tailor and the cloth manufacturer."

We would suggest that garments can be dry cleaned too seldom, not too often, and trying to save a few pennies on dry cleaning is misguided economy. There is no sense in buying a first-class garment and then giving it second-class treatment.
